

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

SECOND PART OF
KING HENRY VI.

ACT I. SCENE I.

London. A Room of state in the Palace.

Fourish of trumpets: then hautboys. Enter, on one side, King HENRY, Duke of GLOSTER, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and Cardinal BEAUFORT; on the other, Queen MARGARET, led in by SUFFOLK; YORK, SOMERSET, BUCKINGHAM, and Others, following.

Suf. As by your high imperial Majesty
I had in charge at my depart for France,
As procurator to your Excellence,
To marry Princess Margaret for your Grace;
So, in the famous ancient city, Tours, —
In presence of the Kings of France and Sicil,
The Dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne, and Alençon,

Seven Earls, twelve Barons, and twenty reverend Bishops, —

I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd:
And humbly now upon my bended knee,
In sight of England and her lordly Peers,
Deliver up my title in the Queen
To your most gracious hands, that are the substance

Of that great shadow I did represent;

The happiest gift that ever Marquess gave,
The fairest Queen that ever King receiv'd.

K. Hen. Suffolk, arise. — Welcome, Queen
Margaret :

I can express no kinder sign of love,
Than this kind kiss. O Lord, that lends me life,
Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness!
For thou hast given me, in this beauteous face,
' A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
' If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.

Q. Mar. Great King of England, and my gracious Lord;

' The mutual conference that my mind hath had —

' By day, by night; waking, and in my dreams;
' In courtly company, or at my beads, —
' With you mine alder-lieftest Sovereign,
' Makes me the bolder to salute my King
' With ruder terms; such as my wit affords,
' And over-joy of heart doth minister.

' K. Hen. Her sight did ravish: but her grace in speech,

' Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
' Makes me, from wondering, fall to weeping joys;

' Such is the fulness of my heart's content. —
' Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my love.

All. Long live Queen Margaret, Englands happiness!

Q. Mar. We thank you all. [Flourish.

Suf. My Lord Protector, so it please your Grace,
Here are the articles of contracted peace,
Between our Sovereign and the French King Charles.
' For eighteen months concluded by consent.

Glo. [reads.] Imprimis, It is agreed between the French King, Charles, and William de la Poole, Marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry King of England, — that the said Henry shall espouse the lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier King of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem; and crown her Queen of England, ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing. — Item, — That the dutchy of Anjou and the county of Maine, shall be released and delivered to the King her father —

K. Hen. Uncle, how now?

Glo. Pardon me, gracious Lord;
Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart,
And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no further,

K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on.

Win. Item, — It is further agreed between them, — that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the King her father; and she sent over of the King of England's own proper cost and charges, without having dowry.

K. Hen. They please us well. — Lord Marquess, kneel down;
We here create thee the first Duke of Suffolk,
And girt thee with the sword. —
Cousin of York, we here discharge your Grace
From being regent in the parts of France,
Till term of eighteen months be full expir'd. — Thanks, uncle. Winchester, Gloster, York, and Buckinham,
Somerset, Salisbury, and Warwick;
We thank you all for this great favour done,
In entertainment to my princely Queen.
Come, let us in; and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and SUFFOLK.]

' And hath his Highness in his infancy
 ' Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes;
 ' And shall these labours, and these honours, die?
 ' Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance,
 ' Your deeds of war, and all our counsel, die?
 ' O Peers of England, shameful is this league!
 ' Fatal this marriage! cancelling your fame;
 ' Blotting your names from books of memory;
 ' Razing the characters of your renown;
 ' Defacing monuments of conquer'd France;
 ' Undoing all, as all had never been!

' This peroration with such circumstance?
' For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.

* But now it is impossible we should:

KING HENRY VI.

9.

Suffolk, the new-made Duke that rules the roast,

‘ Hath given the duchies of Anjou and Maine

* Unto the poor King Reignier, whose large style

* Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

* Sal. Now, by the death of him that died for all,

* These counties were the keys of Normandy: —
But wherefore we Warwick, my valiant son?

‘ War. For grief that they are past recovery:

‘ For, were there hope to conquer them again,

‘ My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears.

‘ Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;

‘ Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:

‘ And are the cities, that I got with wounds,

‘ Deliver’d up again with peaceful words?

‘ Mort Dieu!

* York. For Suffolk’s Duke — may he be suffocate,

* That dims the honour of this warlike isle!

* France should have torn and rent my very heart,

* Before I would have yielded to this league.

‘ I never read but England’s Kings have had ‘ Large sums of gold, and dowries, with their wives:

‘ And our King Henry gives away his own,

‘ To match with her that brings no vantages.

* Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before,

* That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth,

* For costs and charges in transporting her!

* She should have staid in France, and starv’d in France,

* Before —

* Car. My Lord of Gloster, now you grow too hot;

‘ It was the pleasure of my lord the King.

SECOND PART OF

Glo. My Lord of Winchester, I know your mind;

'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike.

But 'tis my presence that doth trouble you,

Rancour will out: Proud Prelate, in thy face

I see thy fury: if I longer stay,

We shall begin our ancient bickerings, —

Lordings, farewell; and say when I am gone.

I prophesy'd — France will be lost ere long. [Exit.]

Car. So, there goes our Protector in a rage.

'Tis known to you he is mine enemy:

* Nay, more, an enemy unto you all;

* And no great friend, I fear me, to the King.

* Consider Lords, — he is the next of blood,

* And heir apparent to the English crown;

* Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,

* And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west.

* There's reason he should be displeas'd at it.

* Look to it, Lords; let not his smoothing words

* Bewitch your hearts; be wise, and circumspect.

* What though the common people favour him,

* Calling him — Humphrey the good Duke of Gloucester;

* Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice —

* Jesu maintain your royal Excellence!

* With—God preserve the good Duke Humphrey!

* I fear me, Lords, for all this flattering gloss,

* He will be found a dangerous Protector,

* Buck. Why should he then protect our Sovereign,

* He being of age to govern of himself? —

* Cousin of Somerset, join you with me.

* And all together, — with the Duke of Suffolk, —

* We'll quickly hoise Duke Humphrey from his seat.

KING HENRY VI.

11

* Car. This weighty business will not brook delay;

* I'll to the Duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit.

* Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride,

* And greatness of his place be grief to us,

* Yet let us watch the haughty Cardinal;

* His insolence is more intolerable

* Than all the Princes in the land beside;

* If Gloster be displac'd, he'll be Protector.

Buck. Or thou, or I, Somerset, will be Protector,

* Despight Duke Humphrey, or the Cardinal.

[Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and SOMERSET.

Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him.

* While these do labour for their own preferment,

* Behoves it us to labour for the realm.

* I never saw but Humphrey Duke of Gloster

* Did bear him like a noble gentleman.

* Oft have I seen the haughty Cardinal —

* More like a soldier, than a man o' the church,

* As stout, and proud, as he were lord of all, —

* Swear like a ruffian, and demean himself

* Unlike the ruler of a common-wealth, —

* Warwick my son, the comfort of my age!

* Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy house-keeping,

* Hath won the greatest favour of the commons,

* Excepting none but good Duke Humphrey. —

* And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland,

* In bringing them to civil discipline;

* Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,

* When thou wert regent for our Sovereign;

* Have made thee fear'd, and honour'd, of the people: —

* Join we together, for the publick good;

' In what we can, to bridle and suppress
 ' The pride of Suffolk, and the Cardinal,
 ' With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition
 ' And, as we may, cherish Duke Humphre deeds,

' While they do tend the profit of the land.

* War. So God help Warwick, as he lo
 the land,

* And common profit of his country!

* York. And so says York, for he hath great cause.

Sal. Then let's make haste away, and lo unto the main.

War. Unto the main! O father, Maine is lo

* And purchase friends, and give to courtezai

* Still revelling, like lords, till all be gone:

* While as the silly owner of the goods

* Weeps over them, and wrings his hapless hand

* And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof,
* While all is shar'd; and all is borne away;
* Ready to starve, and dare not touch his own.
* So York must sit, and fret, and bite his tongue,
* While his own lands are bargain'd for, and sold.
* Methinks, the realms of England, France, and Ireland,

* Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood,
* As did the fatal brand Althea burn'd.
* Unto the Prince's heart of Calydon.

Anjou and Maine, both given unto the French!
Cold news for me; for I had hope of France,
Even as I have of fertile England's soil.

And day will come, when York shall claim his own;
And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts,
And make a show of love to proud Duke Humphrey,
And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown,
For that's the golden mark I seek to hit:

Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,
Nor hold the scepter in his childish fist,
Nor wear the diadem upon his head,

Whose church-like humours fit not for a crown.
Then, York, be still a while, till time do serve:
Watch thou, and wake, when others be asleep,
To pry into the secrets of the state;
Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love,
With his new bride, and England's dear-bought Queen,

And Humphrey with the Peers be fall'n at jars:
Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,
With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd;
And in my standard bear the arms of York,
To grapple with the house of Lancaster;
And, force perforce, I'll make him yield the crown,
Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

The same. A Room in the Duke of Gloster's house.

Enter GLOSTER and the Duchess.

Duch. Why droops my Lord, like over-ripen'd corn,

Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load?

* Why doth the great Duke Humphrey knit his brows,

* As frowning at the favours of the world?

* Why are thine eyes fix'd to the fullen earth,

* Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?

* What see'st thou there? King Henry's diadem,

* Burchas'd with all the honours of the world?

* If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,

* Until thy head be circled with the same.

* Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold:—

* What, is't too short? I'll lengthen it with mine:

* And, having both together heav'd it up,

* We'll both together lift our heads to heaven;

* And never more abase our sight so low,

* As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.

* Glo. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy lord,

* Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts:

* And may that thought, when I imagine ill

* Against my King and nephew, virtuous Henry,

* Be my last breathing in this mortal world!

* My troublous dream this night doth make me sad.

* Duch. What dream'd my Lord? tell me, and I'll requite it

* With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

Glo. Methought, this staff, mine office-badge in court,

‘ Was broke in twain; by whom, I have forgot;

‘ But, as I think, it was by the Cardinal;

‘ And on the pieces of the broken wand

‘ Were plac’d the heads of Edmond Duke of Somerset,

‘ And William de la Poole first Duke of Suffolk.

‘ This was my dream; what it doth bode, God knows.

‘ Duch. Tnt, this was nothing but an argument,
That he, that breaks a stick of Gloster’s grove,

‘ Shall lose his head for his presumption.

‘ But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet Duke:
Methought, I sat in seat of majesty,

In the cathedral church of Westminster,

And in that chair where Kings and Queens are crown’d;

Where Henry, and dame Margaret, kneel’d to me,

‘ And on my head did set the diadem.

‘ Glo. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide outright:

* Presumptuous dame, ill-nurtur’d Eleanor!

Art thou not second woman in the realm;

And the Protector’s wife, belov’d of him?

* Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,

* Above the reach or compass of thy thought?

And wilt thou still be hammering treachery,

* To tumble down thy husband, and thyself,

* From top of honour to disgrace’s feet?

Away from me, and let me hear no more.

‘ Duch. What, what, my Lord! are you so cholerick

‘ With Eleanor, for telling but her dream?

‘ Next time, I’ll keep my dreams unto myself,

‘ And not be check’d.

‘ Glo. Nay, be not angry, I am pleas’d again.

SECOND PART OF

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My Lord Protector, 'tis his Highness' pleasure,

' You do prepare to ride unto Saint Albans,
' Whereas the King and Queen do mean to hawk.

Glo. I go. — Come, Nell, thou wilt ride with us?

Duch. Yes, my good Lord, I'll follow presently.

[Exeunt GLOSTER and Messenger.]

' Follow I must, I cannot go before,

* While Gloster bears this basq and humble mind.

* Were I a man, a Duke, and next of blood,

* I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks,

* And smoothe my way upon their headless necks:

* And, being a woman, I will not be slack

' To play my part in fortuna's pageant.

' Where are you there? Sir John! nay, fear

' We are alone; here's none but thee, and I.

Enter HUME.

Hume. Jesu preserve your royal Majesty!

' Duch. What say'st thou, Majesty! I am but Grace.

' Hume. But, by the grace of God, and His me's advice,

' Your Grace's title shall be multiply'd.

Duch. What say'st thou, man? hast thou as conferr'd

With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch;

And Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer?

And will they undertake to do me good?

' Hume. This they have promised, — to sl your Grace shall be propounded him.

It is enough; I'll think upon the questions:

from saint Albans we do make return,
I see these things effected to the full.
Hume, take this reward; make merry,
man,
thy confederates in this weighty cause.

[Exit Duchess.

me. Hume must make merry with the Duchess' gold;
y, and shall. But, how now, Sir John Hume?

up your lips, and give no words but—mum!
business asketh silent secrecy.

Eleanor gives gold, to bring the witch;
I cannot come amiss, were she a devil.
I have I gold, flies from another coast:
I do not say, from the rich Cardinal, from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk;

do find it so: for, to be plain,
I, knowing dame Eleanor's aspiring humour, hired me to undermine the Duchess,
buzz these conjurations in her brain.

I say, a crafty knave does need no broker;
I am I Suffolk and the Cardinal's broker.

I, if you take not heed, you shall go near all them both — a pair of crafty knaves.

so it stands: And thus, I fear, at last,
his knavery will be the Duchess' wreck;
her attainure will be Humphrey's fall:
how it will, I shall have gold for all.

[Exit.

SECOND PART OF

SCENE III.

The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter PETER, and Others, with Petitions.

1. Pet. My Masters, let's stand close; my lord Protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill.

2. Pet. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man! Jesu bless him!

Enter SUFFOLK, and Queen MARGARET.

* 1. Pet. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the Queen with him; I'll be the first, sure.

2. Pet. Come back, fool; this is the Duke of Suffolk, and not my lord Protector.

Suf. How now, fellow? would'st any thing with me?

Pet. I pray, my Lord, pardon me! I took ye for my lord Protector.

Q. Mar. [reading the superscription.] To my Lord Protector! are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them: What is thine?

1. Pet. Mine is, an't please your Grace, against John Goodman, my lord Cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife and all, from me.

Suf. Thy wife too? that is some wrong, indeed. — What's your's? — What's here! [reads.] Against the Duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford. — How now, sir knave?

2. Pet. Alas, Sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.

[presenting his petition.] Against my , Thomas Horner, for saying, That the of York was rightful heir to the crown.

J. Mar. What say'st thou? Did the Duke of rk say, he was rightful heir to the crown?

Peter. That my master was! No, forsooth:
 ny master said, That he was; and that the King was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there? [Enter Servants.] — Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently: — we'll hear more of your matter before the King.

[Exeunt Servants, with PETER.]

Q. Mar. And as you that love to be protected
 ' Under the wings of our Protector's grace,
 ' Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

[tears the petitions:]

' Away, base cullions! — Suffolk, let them go.

* All. Come, let's be gone. [Exeunt Petitioners.]

* Q. Mar. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,

* Is this the fashion in the court of England?

* Is this the government of Britain's isle,

* And this the royalty of Albion's King?

* What, shall King Henry be a pupil still,

* Under the surly Gloster's governance?

* Am I a Queen in title and in style,

* And must be made a subject to a Duke?

' I tell thee, Poole, when in the city Tours

' Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love,

' And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France;

' I thought, King Henry had resembled thee,

' In courage, courtship, and proportion:

' But all his mind is bent to holiness,

' To number Ave-Maries on his beads:

His champions are—the prophets, and apostles;

- * His weapons, holy saws of sacred writ;
- * His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves
- * Are brazen images of canoniz'd saints.
- * I would, the college of the Cardinals
- * Would choose him Pope, and carry him to Rome,
- * And set the triple crown upon his head;
- * That were a state fit for his Holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient: as I was cause
 ' Your Highness came to England, so will I
 ' In England work your Grace's full content.

* Q. Mar. Beside the haught Protector, have me Beaufort,

- * The imperious churchman; Somerset, Buckingham,
- * And grumbling York: and not the least of these,
- * But can do more in England than the King.

* Suf. And he of these, than can do most of all,
 * Cannot do more in England than the Nevils:
 * Salisbury, and Warwick, are no simple Peers.

* Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half
 so much,

' As that proud dame, the lord Protector's wife.
 ' She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies,

' More like an Empress, than Duke Humphrey's wife;

Strangers in court do take her for the Queen:

- * She bears a Duke's revenues on her back,
- * And in her heart she scorns our poverty:
- * Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her?

* Contemptuous base-born callat as she is,
 ' She vaunted 'mongst her minions t'other day,
 The very train of her worst wearing-gown
 Was better worth than all my father's lands,

* Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.

* Suf. Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for her;

d plac'd a quire of such enticing birds,
 That she will light to listen to the lays,
 And never mount to trouble you again.
 So, let her rest; And, Madam, list to me;
 For I am bold to counsel you in this.
 Although we fancy not the Cardinal,
 Yet must we join with him, and with the lords,
 Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace.
 As for the Duke of York, — this late complaint
 Will make but little for his benefit:
 So, one by one, we'll weed them all at last,
 And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Enter King HENRY, YORK, and SOMERSET, conversing with him; Duke and Duchess of GLOSTER, Cardinal BEAUFORT, BUCKINGHAM, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

K. Hen. For my part, noble Lords, I care not which;

Somerset, or York, all's one to me.

York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,

then let him be deny'd the regentship.

Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place,

let York be regent, I will yield to him.

War. Whether your Grace be worthy, yea,
 or no,

dispute not that; York is the worthier.

Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak.

War. The Cardinal's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this presence are thy betters,
 Warwick.

War. Warwick may live to be the best of all.

* Sal. Peace, son; — and show some reason, Buckingham,

* Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this.

* Q. Mar. Because the King, forsooth, will have it so.

* Glo. Madam, the King is old enough himself
To give his censure: these are no women's matters.

Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs your Grace

To be Protector of his Excellence?

* Glo. Madam, I am Protector of the realm;

* And, at his pleasure, will resign my place.

* Suf. Resign it then, and leave thine insolence,

* Since thou wert King, (as who is King, but thou?)

* The commonwealth hath daily run to wreck:

* The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas;

* And all the Peers and Nobles of the realm

* Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty.

* Car. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clergy's bags,

* Are lank and lean with thy extortions,

* Som. Thy sumptuous buildings, and thy wife's attire,

* Have cost a mass of publick treasury.

* Buck. Thy cruelty in execution,

* Upon offenders, hath exceeded law,

* And left thee to the mercy of the law.

* Q. Mar. Thy sale of offices, and towns in France, —

* If they were known, as the suspect is great, —

* Would make thee quickly hop without thy head.

[Exit GLOSTER. The Queen drops her fan]

* Give me my fan: What, minion! can you not

[gives the Duchess a box on the ear]

* I cry you, mercy; Madam, Was it you?

* Duch. Was't I? yea, I it was, prond French-woman:

* Could I come near your beauty with my nails,
I'd set my ten commandments in your face.

K. Hen. Sweet aunt, be quiet; 'twas against her will.

* Duch. Against her will! Good King, look to't in time;

* She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a baby:

* Though in this place most master wear no
breeches,

She shall not strike dame Eleanor unreveng'd.

[Exit Duchess.]

* Buck. Lord Cardinal, I will follow Eleanor,

* And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds:

* She's tickled now; her fume can need no spurs,

* She'll gallop fast enough to her destruction.

[Exit BUCKINGHAM.]

Re-enter GLOSTER.

* Glo. Now, Lords, my choler being overblown

* With walking once about the quadrangle,

* I come to talk of commonwealth affairs.

* As for your spiteful false objections,

* Prove them, and I lie open to the law:

* But God in mercy so deal with my soul,

* As I in duty love my King and country!

* But, to the matter that we have in hand: —

* I say, my Sovereign, York is meetest man

* To be your regent in the realm of France.

* Suf. Before we make election, give me leave

* To show some reason, of no little force,

* That York is most unmeet of any man.

* York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet.

- ' First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride :
 * Next, if I be appointed for the place,
 * My lord of Somerset will keep me here,
 * Without discharge, money, or furniture,
 * Till France be won into the Dauphin's hands.
 * Last time, I danc'd attendance on his will,
 * Till Paris was besieg'd, famish'd, and lost.
 * War. That I can witness; and a fouler fact
 * Did never traitor in the land commit.
Suf. Peace, head-strong Warwick!
War. Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter Servants of SUFFOLK, bringing in HORNER and PETER.

Suf. Because here is a man accus'd of treason:
 Pray God, the Duke of York excuse himself!

* York. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?

* K. Hen. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? tell me: What are these?

* Suf. Please it your Majesty, this is the man
 ' That doth accuse his master of high treason:

' His words were these; — that Richard, Duke
 of York,

' Was rightful heir unto the English crown;

' And that your Majesty was an usurper.

* K. Hen. Say, man, were these thy words?

Hor. An't shall please your Majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter: God is my witness, I am falsely accus'd by the villain.

' Pet. By these ten bones, my lords, [holding up his hands.] he did speak them to me in the ' garret one night, as we were scouring my lord
 ' of York's armour.

* York. Base dunghill villain, and mechanical,

- * I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech:—
- * I do beseech your royal Majesty,
- * Let him have all the rigour of the law.

Hor. Alas, my Lord, hang me, if ever I spake the words. My accuser is my prentice; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me: I have good witness of this; therefore, I beseech your Majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation.

K. Hen. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law?

- * Glo. This doom, my Lord, if I may judge.
- * Let Somerset be regent o'er the French,
- * Because in York this breeds suspicion:
- * And let these have a day appointed them
- * For single combat, in convenient place;
- * For he hath witness of his servant's malice:
- * This is the law, and this Duke Humphrey's doom.

K. Hen. Then be it so. My Lord of Somerset, We make your Grace lord Regent o'er the French.

Som. I humbly thank your royal Majesty.

Hor. And I accept the combat willingly.

- Pet.* Alas, my Lord, I cannot fight; *for God's
- * sake, pity my case! the spite of man prevaiileth
 - * against me. O, Lord have mercy upon me!
 - * I shall never be able to fight a blow: O Lord,
 - * my heart!

Glo. Sirrah, or you must fight, or else be hang'd.

- * K. Hen. Away with them to prison: and the day
- * Of combat shall be the last of the next month.—
- * Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The same. The Duke of Gloster's Garden.

Enter MARGERY JOUDDAIN, HUME, SOUTHWELL, and BOLINGBROKE.

* Hume. Come, my masters; the Duchess, I * tell you, expects performance of your pro* mises.

* Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided:

* Will her Ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms?

* Hume. Ay; What else? fear you not her courage.

* Boling. I have heard her reported to be
* a woman of an invincible spirit: But it shall * be convenient, master Hume, that you be by
* her aloft, while we be busy below; and so,
* I pray you, go in God's name, and leave us.
* [Exit Hume.] ' Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate, and grovel on the earth: — * John
* Southwell, read you; and let us to our work,

Enter Duchess above.

* Duch. Well said, my masters; and welcome
* all. To this geer; the sooner the better.

* Boling. Patience, good Lady; wizards know their times:

Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night,
' The time of night when Troy was set on fire;
' The time when scritch-owls cry, and bandogs howl,

' And spirits walk, and ghosts break up their graves,

' That time best fits the work we have in hand.
 ' Madam, sit you, and fear not; whom we raise,
 ' We will make fast within a hallow'd verge.

[Here they perform the ceremonies appertaining, and make the circle; Bolingbroke, or Southwell, reads, Conjuro te, &c. It thunders and lightens terribly; then the spirit riseth.

* Spir. Adsum.

* M. Jourd. Asmath,

* By the eternal God, whose name and power
 * Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask;
 * For, till thou speak, thou shalt not pass from
 hence.

* Spir. Ask what thou wilt: — That I had said and done!

Boling. First, of the King. What shall of him become?

[Reading out of a paper.

* Spir. The Duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose;

But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, Southwell writes the answer.

Boling. What fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?

Spir. By water shall he die, and take his end.

Boling. What shall befall the Duke of Somerset?

Spir. Let him shun castles;
 Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains,
 Than where castles mounted stand.

' Have done, for more I hardly can endure:

' Boling. Descend to darkness, and the burning lake;

' False fiend, avoid!

[Thunder and lightning. Spirit descends.]

Enter YORK and BUCKINGHAM, hastily, with their guards, and others.

' York. Lay hands upon these traitors, and their trash.

' Beldame, I think, we watch'd you at an inch. —

' What, Madam, are you there? the King and commonweal

' Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains;

' My lord Protector will, I doubt it not,

' See you well guerdon'd for these good deserts.

* Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England's King,

* Injurious Duke; that threat'st where is no cause.

* Buck. True, Madam, none at all. What call you this?

[Shewing her the papers.]

' Away with them; let them be clapp'd up close,

' And kept asunder: — You, Madam, shall with us: —

' Stafford, take her to thee. —

[Exit Duchess from above.]

' We'll see your trinkets here all forthcoming;

' All. — Away! [Exeunt guards, with SOUTH. BOLINGBROKE, &c.]

* York. Lord Buckingham, methinks, you watch'd her well:

* A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon!

Now, pray, my Lord, let's see the devil's writ.

What have we here?

[Reads.]

The Duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose;

But him outlive, and die a violent death.

* Why, this is just,

* Aio te, Atacida, Romanos vincere posse.

Well, to the rest:

Tell me, what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?

By water shall he die, and take his end. —

What shall betide the Duke of Somerset? —

Let him shun castles;

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains,

Than where castles mounted stand.

* Come, come, my Lords;

* These oracles are hardily attain'd,

* And hardly understood.

* The King is now in progress towards saint Albans,

* With him, the husband of this lovely lady:

* Thither go these news, as fast as horse can carry them;

* A sorry breakfast for my lord Protector.

* Buck. Your Grace shall give me leave, my Lord of York,

* To be the post, in hope of his reward.

* York. At your pleasure, my good Lord. —

* Who's within there, ho!

Enter a Servant.

* Invite my lords of Salisbury and Warwick;

* To sup with me to-morrow night. — Away!

[Exeunt.]

SECOND PART OF

ACT II. SCENE I.

Saint Albans.

Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, GLOSTER, Cardinal, SUFFOLK, with Falconers hollajng.

Q. Mar. Believe me, Lords, for flying at the brook,

' I saw not better sport these seven years' day :

' Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high ;
And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out.

' K. Hen. But what a point, my Lord, your falcon made,

' And what a pitch she flew above the rest ! —

' To see how God in all his creatures works !

* Yea, man and birds, are fain of climbing high.

Suf. No marvel, an it like your Majesty,
My Lord Protector's hawks do tower so well ;
They know, their master loves to be aloft,

* And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.

' Glo. My Lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind
' That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.

' Car. I thought as much ; he'd be above the clouds.

' Glo. Ay, my Lord Cardinal ; How think you by that ?

Were it not good, your Grace could fly to heaven ?

* K. Hen. The treasury of everlasting joy !

' Car. Thy heaven is on earth ; thine eyes and thoughts

' Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart ;

Pernicious Protector, dangerous Peer,

That smooth'st it so with King and commonweal !

Glo. What, Cardinal, is your priesthood-grown peremptory?

* Tantaene animis caelestibus irae?

Churchmen so hot? good uncle, hide such malice;

With such holiness can you do it?

Suf. No malice, Sir; no more than well becomes

So good a quarrel, and so bad a Peer.

Glo. As who, my Lord?

Suf. Why, as you, my Lord;

An't like your lordly Lord-Protectorship.

Glo. Why, Suffolk, England knows thine insolence.

Q. Mar. And thy ambition, Gloster.

K. Hen. I pr'ythee, peace,

Good Queen; and whet not on these furious Peers;
For blessed are the peacemakers on earth.

Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make,
Against this proud Protector, with my sword!

Glo. Faith, holy uncle, 'would 'twere come to that! [Aside to the Cardinal.]

* Car. Marry, when thou dar'st. [Aside.]

* Glo. Make up no factious numbers for the matter,

In thine own person answer thy abuse. [Aside.]

* Car. Ay, where thou dar'st not peep: an if thou dar'st,

This evening, on the east side of the grove.

[Aside.]

* K. Hen. How now, my Lords?

* Car. Believe me, cousin Gloster,

Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly,

We had had more sport. — Come with thy two-hand sword. [Aside to GLO.]

Glo. True, uncle.

Car. Are you advis'd?—the east side of the grove?

Glo. Cardinal, I am with you. [Aside.]

K. Hen. Why; how now, uncle Gloster?

Glo. Talking of hawking; nothing else, my Lord. —

Now, by God's mother, priest, I'll shave your crown for this,

* Or all my fence shall fail. [Aside.]

* Car. Medice teipsum;

* Protector, see to't well, protect yourself. } Aside.

K. Hen. The winds grow high; so do your stomachs, Lords,

* How irksome is this musick to my heart!

* When such strings jar, what hope of harmony?

* I pray, my Lords, let me compound this strife.

Enter an Inhabitant of Saint Albans, crying, A Miracle!

Glo. What means this noise?

Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim?

Inhab. A Miracle! a Miracle!

Suf. Come to the King, and tell him what miracle.

Inhab. Forsooth, a blind man at saint Alban's shrine,

Within this half hour, hath receiv'd his sight;

A man, that ne'er saw in his life before.

K. Hen. Now, God be prais'd! that to believing souls

* Gives light An darkness, comfort in despair!

Enter the Mayor of Saint Albans, and his brethren; and SIMPCOX, borne between two persons in a chair; his wife and a great multitude following.

* Car. Here come the townsmen on procession,
To

* To present your Highness with the man.

* K. Hen. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale,

* Although by his sight his sin be multiply'd.

* Glo. Stand by, my Masters, bring him near
the King,

* His Highness' pleasure is to talk with him.

* K. Hen. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance,

* That we for thee may glorify the Lord.

What, hast thou been long blind, and now restor'd?

Simp. Born blind, an't please your Grace.

Wife. Ay, indeed, was he.

Suf. What woman is this?

Wife. His wife, an't like your Worship.

Glo. Had'st thou been his mother, thou could'st have better told.

K. Hen. Where wert thou born?

Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your Grace.

* K. Hen. Poor soul! God's goodness hath been great to thee:

' Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass,

' But still remember what the Lord hath done.

* Q. Mar. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance,

* Or of devotion, to this holy shrine?

* Simp. God knows, of pure devotion; being call'd

' A hundred times, and oftner, in my sleep

' By good saint Alban; who said, — Simpcox,
come;

' Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee.

* Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many time and oft

* Myself have heard a voice to call him so.

Car. What, art thou lame?

Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me!

Suf. How cam'st thou so?

Simp. A fall off of a tree.

Wife. A plum-tree, Master.

Glo. How long hast thou been blind?

Simp. O, born so, Master.

Glo. What, and would'st climb a tree?

Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.

* Wife. Too true; and bought his climbing very dear.

* Glo. 'Mass, thou lov'dst plums well, that would'st venture so.

* Simp. Alas, good Master, my wife desir'd some damsons,

' And made me climb, with danger of my life.

* Glo. A subtle knave! but yet it shall not serve. —

' Let me see thine eyes: — wink now; — now open them: —

' In my opinion, yet thou see'st not well.

' Simp. Yes, Master, clear as day; I thank God, and saint Alban.

Glo. Say'st thou me so? What colour is this cloak of?

Simp. Red; Master; red as blood.

Glo. Why, that's well said: what colour is my gown of?

Simp. Black, forsooth; coal-black, as jet.

K. Hen. Why then, thou know'st what colour jet is of?

Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.

Glo. But cloaks, and gowns, before this day, a many.

* Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.

Glo. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name?

Simp. Alas, Master, I know not.

Glo. What's his name?

Simp. I know not.

Glo. Nor his?

Simp. No, indeed, master.

Glo. What's thine own name?

Simp. Saunder Simpcox, an if it please you,
master.

Glo. Then Saunder, sit thou there, the lying'st knave

In Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind, Thou might'st as well have known our names, as thus

To name the several colours we do wear.

Sight may distinguish of coulours; but suddenly

To nominate them all, 's impossible. ———

My Lords, saint Alban here hath done a miracle;
And would ye not think that cunning to be great,
That could restore this cripple to his legs again?

Simp. O, Master, that you could!

Glo. My Masters of Saint Albans, have you not beadles in your town, and things call'd whips?

May. Yes, my Lord, if it please your Grace.

Glo. Then send for one presently.

May. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight.
[Exeunt an Attendant.]

Glo. Now fetch me a stool hither by and by.
[A stool brought out.] Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool, and run away.

Simp. Alas, master, I am not able to stand alone.
You go about to torture me in vain.

Re-enter Attendant, with the Beadle.

Glo. Well, Sir, we must have you find your

SECOND PART OF

Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over the same stool.

Bead. I will, my Lord. — Come on, sirrah; I will whip you with your doublet quickly.

Simp. Alas, Master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand.

[After the Beadle has hit him once, he leaps over the stool, and runs away; and the people follow, and cry, A Miracle!]

* K. Hen. O God, see'st thou this, and bear'st thou so long?

* Q. Mar. It made me laugh to see the villain run.

* Glo. Follow the knave; and take this drab away.

* Wife. Alas, Sir, we did it for pure need.

Glo. Let them be whipped through every market town, till they come to Berwick, whence they came. [Exeunt Mayor, Beadle, Wife, &c.]

Car. Duke Humphrey has done a Miracle to-day.

* Suf. True; made the lame to leap, and fly away.

* Glo. But you have done more miracles than you made, in a day, my Lord, whole town to fly.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

* K. Hen. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?

* Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold.

* A sort of naughty persons, lewdly bent, — Under the countenance and confederacy Of lady Eleanor, the Protector's wife,

' The ringleader and head of all this rout, —
 ' Have practis'd dangerously against your state,
 ' Dealing with witches and with conjurers:
 ' Whom we have apprehended in the fact;
 ' Raising up wicked spirits from under ground,
 ' Demanding of King Henry's life and death,
 ' And other of your Highness' privy council,
 ' As more at large your Grace shall understand.

' Car. And so my Lord Protector, by this means
 ' Your Lady is forthcoming yet at London.

' This news, I think, hath turn'd your weapon's edge;

' 'Tis like, my Lord, you will not keep your hour.

[Aside to GLOSTER.]

' Glo. Ambitious churchman, leave to afflict
 my heart!

* Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers:

* And vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee,

* Or to the meanest groom.

* K. Hen. O God, what mischiefs work the wicked ones;

* Heaping confusion on their own heads thereby!

* Q. Mar. Gloster, see here the tainture of thy nest;

* And, look, thyself be faultless, thou wert best.

' Glo. Madam, for myself, to heaven I do appeal,

' How I have lov'd my King, and commonweal:

' And, for my wife, I know not how it stands;

' Sorry I am to hear what I have heard:

' Noble she is; but, if she have forgot

' Honour, and virtue, and convers'd with such

' As, like to pitch, defile nobility,

' I banish her, my bed, and company;

' And give her, as a prey, to law, and shame,

' That hath dishonour'd Gloster's honest name.

' K. Hen. Well, for this night, we will repose us here:
 ' To-morrow, toward London, back again,
 ' To look into this business thoroughly,
 ' And call these foul offenders to their answers;
 ' And poise the cause in justice' equal scales, —
 ' Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails. [Flourish. Exeunt.

S C E N E II.

London. The Duke of York's Garden.

Enter YORK, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

' York. Now, my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick,
 ' Our simple supper ended, give me leave,
 ' In this close walk, to satisfy myself,
 ' In crav'ing your opinion of my title,
 ' Which is infallible, to England's crown.
 * Sal. My Lord, I long to hear it at full,
War. Sweet York, begin: and if thy claim be good,
 The Nevils are thy subjects to command.

' York. Then thus: —
 ' Edward the Third, my Lords, had seven sons:
 ' The first, Edward the Black Prince, Prince of Wales;
 ' The second, William of Hatfield; and the third,
 ' Lionel, Duke of Clarence; next to whom,
 ' Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster:
 ' The fifth, was Edmond Langley, Duke of York;
 ' The sixth, was Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloster;

- ' William of Windsor was the seventh, and last.
 ' Edward, the Black Prince, died before his father;
 ' And left behind him Richard, his only son,
 ' Who, after Edward the Third's death, reign'd as King;
 ' Till Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Lancaster,
 ' The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt,
 ' Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth,
 ' Seiz'd on the realm; depos'd the rightful King;
 ' Sent his poor Queen to France, from whence she came,
 ' And him to Pomfret; where, as all you know,
 ' Harmless Richard was murder'd traiterously.
 * War. Father, the Duke hath told the truth;
 * Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown.
 * York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right;
 * For Richard, the first son's heir, being dead,
 † The issue of the next son should have reign'd.
 * Sal. But William of Hatfield died without an heir.
 * York. The third son, Duke of Clarence,
 (from whose line
 * I claim the crown,) had issue — Philippe, a daughter,
 * Who married Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March.
 * Edmund had issue — Roger, Earl of March:
 * Roger had issue — Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor:
 Sal. This Edmund, in the reign of Boling-broke,
 ' As I have read, laid claim unto the crown;
 ' And, but for Owen Glendower, had been King,
 ' Who kept him in captivity, till he died.
 * But, to the rest.

' York. His eldest sister, Anne,
' My mother, being heir unto the crown,
' Married Richard, Earl of Cambridge; who was son

' To Edmund Langley, Edward the third's fifth son.

' By her I claim the kingdom; she was heir
' To Roger, Earl of March; who was the son
' Of Edmund Mortimer; who married Philippe,
' Sole daughter unto Lionel, Duke of Clarence:
' So, if the issue of the elder son
' Succeed before the younger, I am King.

' War. What plain proceedings are more plain than this?

' Henry doth claim the crown from John of Gaunt,
' The fourth son; York claims it from the third.
' Till Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign:
' It fails not yet; but flourishes in thee,
' And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock. —
' Then, father Salisbury, kneel we both together;
' And, in this private plot, be we the first,
' That shall salute our rightful Sovereign
' With honour of his birthright to the crown.

Both. Long live our Sovereign Richard, England's King!

' York. We thank you, Lords. But I am not your King

' Till I be crown'd; and that my sword be stain'd
' With heart-blood of the house of Lancaster:
' End that's not suddenly to be perform'd;
' But with advice, and silent secrecy,
' Do you, as I do, in these dangerous days,
' Wink at the Duke of Suffolk's insolence,
' At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
' At Buckingham, and all the crew of them,
' Till they have snar'd the shepherd of the flock,

- * That virtuous Prince, the good Duke Humphrey:
- * 'Tis that they seek; and they, in seeking that,
- * Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy.

* Sal. My Lord, break we off; we know your mind at full.

* War. My heart assures me, that the Earl of Warwick

- * Shall one day make the Duke of York a King.

* York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself. —

- * Richard shall live to make the Earl of Warwick

* The greatest man in England, but the King.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same. A Hall of justice.

Trumpets sounded. Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, GLOSTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, and SALISBURY; the Duchess of GLOSTER, MAR-GERY JOURDAIN, SOUTHWELL, HUME, and BO-LINGBROKE, under guard.

* K. Hen. Stand forth, Dame Eleanor Cob-ham, Gloster's wife:

- * In sight of God, and us, your guilt is great;

* Receive the sentence of the law, for sins

* Such as by God's book are adjudg'd to death. —

* You four, from hence to prison back again;

[to Jourd. &c.]

* From thence, unto the place of execution:

* The witch in Smithfield shall be burn'd to ashes,

* And you three shall be strangled on the gallows. —

' You, Madam, for you are more nobly born,
[to the Duchess.

' Despoiled of your honour in your life,
' Shall, after three days' open penance done,
' Live in your country here, in banishment,
' With Sir John Stanley, in the isle of Man.

' Duch. Welcome is banishment, welcome were my death.

* Glo. Eleanor, the law, thou seest, hath judged thee;

' I cannot justify whom the law condemns. — [Exeunt the Duchess, and the other Prisoners, guarded.

' Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.
' Ah, Humphrey, this dishonour in thine age
' Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground! —
' I beseech your Majesty, give me leave to go;
' Sorrow would solace, and mine age would ease.

' K. Hen. Stay, Humphrey Duke of Gloster:
ere thou go,

' Give up thy staff; Henry will to himself
' Protector be: and God shall be my hope,
' My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet;
' And go in peace, Humphrey; no less belov'd,
' Than when thou wert Protector to thy King.

* Q. Mar. I see no reason, why a King of years

* Should be to be protected like a child. —
' God and King Henry govern England's helm:
' Give up your staff, Sir, and the King his realm.

' Glo. My staff? — here, noble Henry, is my staff:

' As willingly do I the same resign,
' As e'er thy father Henry made it mine;
*And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it,
As others would ambitiously receive it.*

' Farewel, good King: When I am dead and gone,

May honourable peace attend thy throne! [Exit.]

' Q. Mar. Why, now is Henry King, and Margaret Queen;

* And Humphrey, Duke of Gloster, scarce himself,

* That bears so shrewd a maim; two pulls at once, —

* His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off;

* This staff of honour raught: — ' There let it stand,

' Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.

* Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine, and hangs his sprays;

* Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days.

' York. Lords, let him go. — Please it your Majesty,

' This is the day appointed for the combat;

' And ready are the appellant and defendant,

' The armourer and his man, to enter the lists,

' So please your Highness to behold the fight,

* Q. Mar. Ay, good my Lord; for purposely therefore

* Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

' K. Hen. O' God's name, see the lists and all things fit;

' Here let them end it, and God defend the right!

* York. I never saw a fellow worse bested,

* Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,

* The servant of this armourer, my Lords,

*Enter, on one side, HORNER, and his neighbours, drinking to him so much that he is drunk;
and he enters bearing his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; a drum before him; at* the other side, PETER, with a drum and a similar staff; accompanied by prentices drinking to him.

1. Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack; And fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough.

2. Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco.

3. Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour: drink and fear not your man.

Hor. Let it come, i'faith, and I'll pledge you all; And a fig for Peter!

1. Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and be not afraid.

2. Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master: fight for credit of the prentices.

Pet. I thank you all: * drink, and pray for me, I pray you; for, I think, I have taken * my last draught in this world. — Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron; and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer: — and here, Tom, take all the money that I have. — O Lord, bless me, I pray God! for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.

Sal. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows. — Sirrah, what's thy name?

Pet. Peter, forsooth.

Sal. Peter! what more?

Pet. Thump.

Sal. Thump! then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave, and myself an honest man: * and touching the Duke of York, — will take my death. I never meant him any ill, nor the King, nor the Queen;* And therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow, as Bevis of Southampton fell upon Ascapart.

* York. Despatch: — this knave's tongue begins to double. Sound trumpets, alarum to the combatants. [Alarum. They fight, and Peter strikes down his master.]

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason. [Dies.]

* York. Take away his weapon: — Fellow, * thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way.

* Pet. O God! have I overcome mine enemies ' in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevail'd in right!

K. Hen. Go, take hence that traitor from our sight;

For, by his death, we do perceive his guilt:
And God, in justice, hath reveal'd to us
The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,
Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully. —

Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The same. A street.

Enter GLOSTER and Servants, in mourning cloaks.

* Glo. Thus sometimes, hath the brightest day,
a cloud;

* And, after summer, evermore succeeds
 * Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold;
 * So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet. —
 Sirs, what's o'clock?

Serv. Ten, my Lord.

* Glo. Ten is the hour that was appointed me;
 * To watch the coming of my punish'd Duchess:
 * Uneath may she endure the flinty streets,
 * To tread them with her tender - feeling feet.
 Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook
 The abject people, gazing on thy face,
 With envious looks still laughing at thy shame;
 That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels,
 When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.
 * But, soft! I think she comes; and I'll prepare
 * My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries.

Enter the Duchess of GLOSTER, in a white sheet, with papers pin'd upon her back, her feet bare, and a taper burning in her hand; Sir John Stanley, a sheriff, and officers.

Serv. So please your Grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

* Glo. No, stir not, for your lives; let her pass by.

Duch. Come you, my Lord, to see my open shame?

Now thou dost penance too. Look, how they gaze!

* See, how the giddy multitude do point,
 * And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee!

* *Ah, Gloster, hide thee from their hateful looks;
 * And, in thy closet pent up, rue my shame,*

And ban thine enemies, both mine and thine.

Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this grief.

Duch. Ah, Gloster, teach me to forget myself:

or, whilst I think I am thy married wife,
and thou a Prince, Protector of this land,
Methinks, I should not thus be led along,
lail'd up in shame, with papers on my back;
And follow'd with a rabble, that rejoice
To see my tears, and hear my deep-set groans.
The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet;
and, when I start, the envious people laugh,
and bid me be advised how I tread.

Ah, Humphrey, can I bear this shameful yoke?
Trow'st thou, that e'er I'll look upon the world;

Or count them happy, that enjoy the sun?
No; dark shall be my light, and night my day;
To think upon my pomp, shall be my hell.
Sometime I'll say, I am Duke Humphrey's wife;
and he a Prince, and ruler of the land:
Yet so he rul'd, and such a Prince he was,
as he stood by, whilst I, his forlorn Duchess,
Was made a wonder, and a pointing-stock,
To every idle rascal follower.

But be thou mild, and blush not at my shame;
For stir at nothing, till the axe of death hang over thee, as, sure, it shortly will.

For Suffolk, — he that can do all in all

With her, that hateth thee, and hates us all, — and York, and impious Beaufort, that false priest,

have all lim'd bushes to betray thy wings,
and, fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle
thee:

But fear not thou, until thy foot be snar'd,

* Nor never seek prevention of thy foes.

* Glo. Ah, Nell, forbear; thou aimest all awry;

* I must offend, before I be attainted:

* And had I twenty times so many foes,

* And each of them had twenty times their power,

* All these could not procure me any scathe,

* So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless.

* Would'st have me rescue thee from this reproach?

* Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away,

* But I in danger for the breach of law.

* Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell:

* I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience;

* These few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your Grace to his Majesty's parliament, holden at Bury the first of this next month.

Glo. And my consent ne'er ask'd herèin before!
This is close dealing. — Well, I will be there.

[Exit. Herald.

My Nell, I take my leave: — and, master sheriff, Let not her penance exceed the King's commission.

* Sher. An't please your Grace, here my commission stays:

* And Sir John Stanley is appointed now

* To take her with him to the isle of Man.

* Glo. Must you, Sir John, protect my lady here?

* Stan. So am I given in charge, may't please your Grace.

Glo.

Glo. Entreat her not the worse, in that I pray
You use her well: the world may laugh again;
And I may live to do'you kindness, if You do it her. And so, Sir John, farewell.

Duch. What gone, my Lord; and bid me not farewell?

* Glo. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak. [Exeunt GLOSTER, and Servants.]

* Duch. Art thou gone too? * All comfort go with thee!

* For none abides with me: my joy is — death;

* Death, at whose name I oft have been afraid,

* Because I wish'd this world's eternity. —

* Stanley, I prythee, go, and take me hence;

* I care not whither, for I beg no favour,

* Only convey me where thou art commanded.

* Stan. Why, Madam, that is to the isle of Man;

* There to be us'd according to your state.

* Duch. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach:

* And shall I then be us'd reproachfully?

* Stan. Like to the Duchess, and Duke Humphrey's lady,

* According to that state you shall be us'd.

* Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare;

* Although thou hast been conduct of my shame!

* Sher. It is my office; and, Madam, pardon me.

* Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is dis-charg'd. —

* Come, Stanley, shall we go?

* Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off this sheet:

* And go we to attire you for our journey.

* Vol. 2.

50 SECOND PART OF

- Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet:
• No, it will hang upon my richest robes,
• And show itself, attire me how you can.
• Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison.
[Exeunt.]

ACT III. SCENE I.

The Abbey at Bury.

Enter to the parliament, King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, Cardinal BEAUFORT, SUFFOLK, YORK, BUCKINGHAM, and Others.

- K. Hen. I muse, my Lord of Gloster is not come:
• 'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
• Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now.
• Q. Mar. Can you not see? or will you not observe
• The strangeness of his alter'd countenance?
• With what a majesty he bears himself;
• How insolent of late he is become,
• How proud, peremptory, and unlike himself?
• We know the time, since he was mild and affable;
• And, if we did but glance a far-off look,
• Immediately he was upon his knee,
• That all the court admir'd him for submission;
• But meet him now, and, he it in the morn,
• When every one will give the time of day,
• He knits his brow, and shows an angry eye,
• And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee,

' Disdaining duty that to us belongs.
 ' Small curs are not regarded, when they grin;
 ' But great men tremble, when the lion roars;
 ' And Humphrey is no little man in England.
 ' First, note, that he is near you in descent;
 ' And, should you fall, he is the next will mount;
 ' Me seemeth then, it is no policy, —
 ' Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears,
 ' And his advantage following your decease, —
 ' That he should come about your royal person,
 ' Or be admitted to your Highness' council.
 ' By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts;
 ' And, when he please to make commotion,
 ' 'Tis to be fear'd, they all will follow him.
 ' Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;
 ' Suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the garden,
 ' And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.
 ' The reverent care, I bear unto my Lord,
 ' Made me collect these dangers in the Duke.
 ' If it be fond, call it a woman's fear;
 ' Which fear if better reasons can supplant,
 ' I will subscribe, and say — I wrong'd the Duke.
 ' My Lord of Suffolk, — Buckingham, — and York, —
 ' Reprove my allegation, if you can;
 ' Or else conclude my words effectual.
 ' Suf. Well hath your Highness seen into the Duke;
 ' And, had I first been put to speak my mind,
 I think, I should have told your Grace's tale.
 * The Duchess, by his subornation,
 * Upon my life, began her devilish practices;
 * Or if he were not privy to those faults,
 * Yet, by repeating of his high descent,

* (As next the King, he was successive heir,)
 * And such high vaunts of his nobility,
 * Did instigate the bedlam brainsick Duchess,
 * By wicked means to frame our Sovereign's fall.
 Smooth runs the water, where the brook is deep;
 * And in his simple show he harbours treason.
 The fox barks not, when he would steal the lamb.

No, no, my Sovereign; Gloster is a man
 Unfounded yet, and full of deep deceit.

* Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
 * Devise strange deaths for small offences done?
York. And did he not, in his protectorship,
 * Levy great sums of money through the realm,
 * For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it?
 * By means whereof, the towns each day revolted.
Buck. Tut! these are petty faults to faults unknown.

* Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humphrey.

* H. Hen. My Lords, at once: The care you have of us,

* To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot,

* Is worthy praise: But shall I speak my conscience?

* Our kinsman Gloster is as innocent

* From meaning treason to our royal person,

* As is the sucking lamb, or harmless dove:

* The Duke is virtuous, mild; and too well given,

* To dream on evil, or to work my downfall.

* Q. Mar. Ah, what's more dangerous than this fond affiance!

* Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd.
 * For he's disposed as the hateful raven.

- * Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
- * For he's inclin'd as are the ravenous wolves.
- * Who cannot steal a shape, that means deceit?
- * Take heed, my Lord; the welfare of us all
- * Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Enter SOMERSET.

- * Som. All health unto my gracious Sovereign!
- K. Hen.* Welcome, Lord Somerset. What news from France?
- * Som. That all your interest in those territories
- * Is utterly bereft you; all is lost.
- K. Hen.* Cold news, Lord Somerset: But God's will be done!
- York.* Cold news for me; for I had hope of France,
- As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
- * Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,
- * And caterpillars eat my leaves away:
- * But I will remedy this gear ere long,
- * Or sell my title for a glorious grave. [Aside.]

Enter GLOSTER.

- * Glo. All happiness unto my Lord the King!
- Pardon, my Liege, that I have staid so long.
- Suf.* Nay, Gloster, know, that thou art come too soon,
- * Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art:
- I do arrest thee of high treason here.
- Glo.* Well, Suffolk, yet thou shalt not see me blush,
- Nor change my countenance for this arrest;
- * A heart unspotted is not easily daunted.

* The purest spring is not so free from mud,
* As I am clear from treason to my Sovereign:
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my Lord, that you took bribes of France,
And, being Protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay;
By means whereof, his Highness hath lost France.
Glo. Is it but thought so? What are they, that think it?

' I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay,
 ' Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.
 ' So help me God, as I have watch'd the night,—
 ' Ay, night by night, — in studying good for England!

' That do it that e'er I wrested from the King,
' Or any groat I hoarded to my use,
' Be brought against me at my trial day!

'No! many a pound of mine own proper store;
'Because I would not tax the needy commons,
'Have I dispursed to the garrisons.

And never ask'd for restitution,

* Car. It serves you well, my Lord, to say
so much.

* Glo. I say no more than truth, so help me God!

York. In your protectorship, you did devise Strange tortures for offenders; never heard of,
That England was defam'd by tyranny.

Glo. Why, 'tis well known, that whiles I was Protector,

Pity was all the fault that was in me;

* For I should melt at an offender's tears,

 And lowly words were ransom for their fault:

‘ Unless it were a bloody murderer,

Or foul felonious thief, that Nec'd poor passengers,

' I never gave them condign punishment:

' Murder, indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd

' Above the felon, or what trespass else.

' Suf. My Lord, these faults are easy, quickly answer'd;

' But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,

' Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.

' I do arrest you in his Highness' name;

' And here commit you to my Lord Cardinal

' To keep, until your farther time of trial.

' K. Hen. My Lord of Gloster, 'tis my special hope,

' That you will clear yourself from all suspects;
My conscience tells me, you are innocent.

Glo. Ah, gracious Lord, these days are dangerous!

* Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition,

* And charity chas'd hence by rancour's hand;

* Foul subornation is predominant,

* And equity exil'd your Highness' land.

* I know, their complot is to have my life;

* And, if my death might make this island happy,

* And prove the period of their tyranny,

* I would expend it with all willingness:

* But mine is made the prologue to their play;

* For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,

* Will not conclude their plotted tragedy.

* Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice,

* And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate;

* Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue

* The envions load that lies upon his heart;

* And dogged York, that reaches at the moon,

* Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back,

* By false accuse doth level at my life: —

* And you, my sovereign Lady, with the rest,

' Causeless have laid disgraces on my head;
 * And, with your best endeavour, have stirr'd up
 * My liefeſt Liege to be mine enemy:
 * Ay, all of you have laid your heads together,
 * Myſelf had notice of your conventicles,
 * And all to make away my guiltleſs life:
 * I ſhall not want falſe witneſs to condemn me,
 * Nor ſtore of treaſons to augment my guilt;
 * The ancient proverb will be effected, —

A ſtaff is quickly found to beat a dog.

* Car. My Liege, his railing is intolerable:
 * If thoſe, that care to keep your royal perſon
 * From treaſon's ſecret knife, and traitors' rage,
 * Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,
 * And the offender granted ſcope of ſpeech,
 * 'Twill make them cool in zeal unto your Grace.
Suf. Hath he not twit our ſovereign lady here,
 * With ignominious words, though clerkly couch'd,
 * As if ſhe had ſuborned ſome to ſwear
 * Falſe allegations to o'erthrow his ſtate?

* Q. Mar. But I can give the loſer leave to chide.

Glo. Far truer ſpoke, than meant: I loſe indeed; —

* Beſhrew the winners, for they play'd me falſe! —

* And well ſuch loſers may have leave ſo ſpeak.

Buck. He'll wreſt the ſenſe, and hold us here all day: —

* Lord Cardinal, he is your priſoner.

* Car. Sirs, take away the Duke, and guard him ſure.

Glo. Ah, thus King Henry throws away his crutch,

Before his legs he firm to bear his body:

Thus is the ſhepherd beaten from thy ſide, wolves are gnawing who shall gnaw thee first.

that my fear were false! ah, that it were!
good King Henry, thy decay I fear.

[Exeunt Attendants, with GLOSTER.]

Hen. My Lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best,
or undo, as if ourself were here.

Mar. What, will your Highness leave the parliament?

Hen. Ay, Margaret; my heart is drown'd with grief,

whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes;

body round begirt with misery;

what's more miserable than discontent? —

uncle Humphrey! in thy face I see map of honour, truth, and loyalty;

yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come, thou e'er I prov'd thee false, or fear'd thy faith.

that low'ring star now envies thy estate,

that these great lords, and Margaret our Queen, seek subversion of thy harmless life?

thou never didst them wrong, nor no man wrong:

as the butcher takes away the calf,

he binds the wretch, and beats it when it strays,

bring it to the bloody slaughter-house;

and so, remorseless, have they borne him
hence.

as the dam runs lowing up and down,

marking the way her harmless young one went,

she can do nought but wail her darling's loss;

so myself bewails good Gloster's case;

- * With sad unhelpful tears; and with dimm'd eyes
- * Look after him; and cannot do him good;
- * So mighty are his vowed enemies.
- * His fortunes I will weep; and, 'twixt each groan.
- * Say — Who's a traitor, Gloster he is none. [Exit.

* Q. Mar. Free Lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams.

- * Henry my Lord is cold in great affairs,
- * Too full of foolish pity: and Gloster's show
- * Beguiles him, as the mournful crocodile
- * With sorrow snares relenting passengers;
- * Or as the snake, roll'd in a flow'ring bank;
- * With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a child.
- * That, for the beauty, thinks it excellent.
- * Believe me, Lords, were none more wise than I.
- * (And yet, herein, I judge mine own wit good.)
- * This Gloster should be quickly rid the world,
- * To rid us from the fear we have of him.

- * Car. That he should die, is worthy policy;
- * But yet we want a colour for his death.
- * 'Tis meet, he be condemn'd by course of law.
- * Suf. But, in my mind, that were no policy:
- * The King will labour still to save his life,
- * The commons haply rise to save his life;
- * And we yet have but trivial argument,
- * More than mistrust, that shows him worthy death.

* York. So that, by this, you would not have him die,

* Suf. Ah, York, no man alive so fair as I

- * York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death. —
- * But, my Lord Cardinal, and you, my Lord of Suffolk, —
- * Say as you think, and speak it from your souls, —
- * Wer't not all one, an empty eagle were set
- * To guard the chicken from a hungry kite,
- * As place Duke Humphrey for the King's Protector?

Q. Mar. So the poor chicken should be sure of death.

* Suf. Madam, 'tis true: And wer't not madness then,

- ' To make the fox surveyor of the fold?
- ' Who being accus'd a crafty murderer,
- ' His guilt should be but idly posted over,
- ' Because his purpose is not executed.
- ' No; let him die, in that he is a fox,
- ' By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock;
- ' Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood;
- ' As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my Liege,
- ' And do not stand on quilllets, how to slay him:
- ' Be it by gins, by snares, by subtilty,
- ' Sleeping, or waking, 'tis no matter how,
- ' So he be dead; for that is good deceit
- ' Which mates him first, that first intends deceit.

* Q. Mar. Thrice-noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

* Suf. Not resolute, except so much were done;

- * For things are often spoke, and seldom meant;
- * But, that my heart accordeth with my tongue,—
- * Seeing the deed is meritorious,
- * And to preserve my Sovereign from his foe, —
- * Say but the word, and I will be his priest.

- * Car. But I would have him dead, my Liege
of Suffolk,
- * Ere you can take due orders for a priest:
- * Say you consent, and censure well the deed
- * And I'll provide his executioner,
- * I tender so the safety of my Liege.
- * Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worth doing.

* O. Mar. And so say I.

- * York. And I: and now we three have spok
 - * It skills not greatly who impugns our doom
- Enter a Messenger.*

Mes. Great Lords, from Ireland am I come to tell you that the rebels there are up,

- * To signify that rebels there are up,
- * And put the Englishmen unto the sword:
- * Send in court, Lords, and stop the rage
- * Before the wound do grow uncurable;
- * For, being green, there is great hope of cure.
- * Car. A breach, that craves a quick expedient
- * What counsel give you in this weighty cause?
- * York. That Somerset be sent as Regent
- * In his stead, that lucky ruler be employed
- * Witness the fortune he hath had in France.
- * Som. If York, with all his far-fetched policy
- * Had been the Regent there instead of me,
- * He never would have staid in France so long
- * York. No, not to lose it all upon thought
- * I rather would have lost my life betimes,
- * Than bring a burden of dishonour home,

* By staying there so long, till all were lost.
 * Show me one scar-character'd on thy skin:

* Men's flesh preserv'd so whole, do seldom win.

* Q. Mar. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire,

* If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with: —

* No more, good York; — sweet Somerset, be still: —

* Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been Regent
 there,

* Might happily have prov'd far worse than his.

York. What, worse than naught? nay, then a shame take all!

* Som. And, in the number, thee, that wishes
 shame!

* Car. My Lord of York, try what your fortune is,

* The uncivil Kernes of Ireland are in arms,

* And temper clay with the blood of Englishmen:

* To Ireland will you lead a band of men,

* Collected choicely; from each county some,

* And try your hap against the Irishmen?

* York. I will, my Lord, so please his Majesty.

* Suf. Why, our authority is his consent;

* And, what we do establish, be confus'd:

* Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.

* York. I am content: Provide me soldiers,
 Lords,

* Whiles I take order for mine own affairs.

* Suf. A charge, Lord York, that I will see perform'd.

* But now return we to the false Duke Humphrey.

* Car. No more of him; for I will deal with
 him,

* That, henceforth, he shall trouble us no more.
 * And so break off; the day is almost spent:

* Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.

* York: My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days,

* At Bristol I expect my soldiers;

* For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.

* Suf. I'll see it truly done, my Lord of York:
[Exeunt all but YORK.]

* York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts,

* And change misdoubt to resolution:

* Be that thou hop'st to be; or what thou art.

* Resign to death, it is not worth the enjoying:

* Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born man,

* And find no harbour in a royal heart.

* Faster than spring-time showers, comes thought on thought;

* And not a thought, but thinks on dignity.

* My brain, more busy than the labouring spiler,

* Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies.

* Well; Nobles, well; 'tis politicly done,

* To send me packing with an host of men:

* I fear me, you but warm the starved snake,

* Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts,

* 'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give them me:

* I take it kindly; yet, be well assur'd

* You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands.

* Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band.

* I will stir up in England some black storm,

* Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven,
hell:

* And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage

* Until the golden circuit on my head,

- * Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,
- * Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.
- * And, for a minister of my intent,
- * I have seduc'd a head-strong Kentishman,
- * John Cade of Ashford,
- * To make commotion, as full well he can,
- * Under the title of John Mortimer.
- * In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade
- * Oppose himself against a troop of Kernes;
- * And fought so long, till that his thighs with darts.
- * Were almost like a sharp quill'd porcupine;
- * And, in the end being rescu'd, I have seen him
- * Caper upright like a wild Mórisco,
- * Shaking the bloody darts, as he his bells.
- * Full often, like a shag-haired crafty kern,
- * Hath he conversed with the enemy;
- * And undiscover'd come to me again,
- * And given me notice of their villainies.
- * This devil here shall be my substitute;
- * For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,
- * In face, in gait, in speech he doth resemble;
- * By this I shall perceive the commons' mind,
- * How they affect the house and claim of York.
- * Say, he be taken, rack'd, and tortured;
- * I know, no pain, they can inflict upon him,
- * Will make him say — I mov'd him to those arms.
- * Say, that he thrive, (as 'tis great like he will,)
- * Why, then from Ireland come I with my strength,
- * And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd:
- * For, Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
- * And Henry put apart, the next for me. [Exit.

SECOND PART OF

SCENE II.

Bury. A Room in the Palace.

Enter certain Murderers, hastily.

1. Mur. Run to my lord of Suffolk; let him know, we have despatch'd the Duke; as he commanded.

2. Mur. O, that it were to do! — What have we done? — Didst ever hear a man so penitent?

Enter SUFFOLK.

1. Mur. Here comes my lord.

Suf. Now, Sirs, have you despatch'd this thing?

1. Mur. Ay, my good Lord, he's dead.

Suf. Why, that's well said. Go, get you to my house; I will reward you for this venturous deed.

The King and all the Peers are here at hand: — have you laid fair the bed? are all things well, according as I gave directions?

1. Mur. 'Tis, my good Lord.

Suf. Away, be gone! [Exeunt Murderers.]

Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, Cardinal BEAUFORT, SOMERSET, Lords, and Others.

K. Hen. Go, call our uncle to our presence straight: — we intend to try his Grace to-day.

' If he be guilty, as 'tis published.

' Suf. I'll call him presently, my noble Lord.

[Exit.]

' K. Hen. Lords, take your places; — And,

I pray you all,

' Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle Gloster,

' Than from true evidence, of good esteem,

' He be approv'd in practice culpable.

* Q. Mar. God forbid, any malice should prevail,

* That faultless may condemn a nobleman!

* Pray God, he may acquit him of suspicion!

* K. Hen. I thank thee, Margaret; these words content me much. —

Re-enter SUFFOLK.

' How now? why look'st thou pale? why trem-blest thou?

' Where is our uncle? what is the matter, Suffolk?

' Suf. Dead in his bed, my Lord; Gloster is dead.

* Q. Mar. Marry, God forefend!

* Car. God's secret judgement: — I did dream to-night,

* The Duke was dumb, and could not speak a word. [The King swoons.]

' Q. Mar. How fares my Lord? — Help, Lords!
the King is dead.

* Som. Rear up his body; wring him by the nose.

* Q. Mar. Run, go, help, help! — O, Henry, ope thine eyes!

* Suf. He doth revive again; — Madam, be patient.

SECOND PART OF

- * K. Hen. O heavenly God!
- * Q. Mar. How fares my gracious Lord?
- Suf.* Comfort, my Sovereign! gracious Henry,

K. Hen. What, doth my Lord of Suffolk comfort me?

Came he right now to sing a raven's note,
 * Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers;
 And thinks he, that the chirping of a wren,
 ' By crying comfort from a hollow breast,
 ' Can chase away the first-conceived sound?
 * Hide not thy poison with such sugar'd words.
 * Lay not thy hands on me; forbear, I say;
 * Their touch affrights me, as a serpent's sting.
 Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight!
 ' Upon thy eye-balls murderous tyranny
 ' Sits, in grim Majesty, to fright the world.
 ' Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wound ing: —

* Yet do not go away; — Come, basilisk,
 ' And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight:
 * For in the shade of death I shall find joy;
 * In life, but double death, now Gloster's de sighs,

* And all to have the noble Duke alive.

- ' For it is knowh, we were but hollow friends;
 ' It may be judg'd, I made the Duke away.
 * So shall my name with slander's tongue be wounded,
 * And Princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach.
 * This get I by his death: Ah me, unhappy!
 * To be a Queen, and crown'd with infamy!

' K. Hen. Ah, woe is me for Gloster, wretched man!

Q. Mar. Be woe for me, more wretched than he is.

What, dost thou turn away, and hide thy face?

I am no loathsome leper, look on me.

- * What, art thou, like the adder, waxen deaf?
 * Be poisonous too, and kill thy forlorn Queen.
 * Is all thy comfort shut in Gloster's tomb?

* Why, then dame Margaret was ne'er thy joy:

* Erect his statue then, and worship it,

* And make my image but an alchouse sign.

Was I, for this, nigh wreck'd upon the sea:

' And twice by aukward wind from England's bank

' Drove back again unto my native clime?

What boded this, but well-fore-warning wind

Did seem to say, — Seek not a scorpion's nest,

* Nor set no footing on this unkind shore?

* What did I then, but curs'd the gentle gusts,

* And he that loos'd them from their brazen caves;

* And bid them blow towards England's blessed shore,

* Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock?

* Yet Aeolus would not be a murderer,

* But left that hateful office unto thee:

* The pretty vaulting sea refus'd to drown me;

- * Knowing, that thou would'st have me drown'd on shore
- * With tears as salt as sea through thy unkindness:
- * The splitting rocks row'd in the sinking sands;
- * And would not dash me with their ragged sides;
- * Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,
- * Might in thy palace perish Margaret.
- * And far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,
- * When from the shore the tempest beat us back,
- * I stood upon the hatches in the storm:
- * And when the dusky sky began to rob
- * My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view,
- * I took a costly jewel from my neck, —
- * A heart it was, bound in with diamonds, —
- * And threw it towards thy land; the sea re-ceiv'd it;
- * And so, I wish'd, thy body might my heart:
- * And even with this, I lost fair England's view;
- * And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart;
- * And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles;
- * For loosing ken of Albion's wished coast.
- * How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue
- * (The agent of thy foul inconstancy),
- * To sit and witch me, as Ascanius did,
- * When he to madding Dido, would unfold
- * His father's acts, commeno'd in burning Troy?
- * Am I not witch'd like her? or thou not false like him?
- * Ah me, I can no more! Die, Margaret!
- * For Henry weeps, that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY.

The Commons press to the door.

War. It is reported, mighty Sovereign,

- * That good Duke Humphrey traitorously is murder'd
- * By Suffolk and the Cardinal Beaufort's means.
- * The commons, like an angry hive of bees,
- * That want their leader, scatter up and down,
- * And care not who they sting in his revenge.
- * Myself have calm'd their splendid mutiny,
- * Until they hear the order of his death.

K. Hen. That he is dead, good Warwick, 'tis too true;

But how he died, God knows, not Henry:

- * Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,
- * And comment then upon his sudden death.

War. That I shall do, my Liege: — Stay,
Salisbury,

With the rude multitude, till I return.

[Warwick goes into an inner room, and Salisbury retires.]

* K. Hen. O thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts;

- * My thoughts, that labour to persuade my soul,
- * Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's life!

- * If my suspect be false, forgive me, God;
- * For judgement only doth belong to thee!
- * Fain would I go to chafe his paly lips
- * With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain
- * Upon his face an ocean of salt tears;
- * To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk,
- * And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling:
- * But all in vain are these mean obsequies;
- * And, to survey his dead and earthy image,
- * What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

The folding doors of an inner chamber are thrown open, and GLOSTER, is discovered dead in his bed: WARWICK and Others standing by it.

* War. Come hither, gracious Sovereign, view this body.

* K. Hen. That is to see how deep my grave is made:

* For, with his soul, fled all my worldly solace;

* For seeing him, I see my life in death.

* War. As surely as my soul intends to live

* With that dread King, that took our state upon him

* To free us from his Father's wrathful curse,

* I do believe that violent hands were laid

* Upon the life of this thrice-famed Duke.

* Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!

* What instance gives Lord Warwick for his Vow?

* War. See, how the blood is settled in his face!

Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost,

* Of ashy semblance, meager, pale, and blood-less,

* Being all descended to the labouring heart;

* Who, in the conflict that it holds with death,

* Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy;

* Which with the heart there cools, and ne'er
returneth

* To blush and beautify the cheek again.

* But, see, his face is black, and full of blood;

* His eyeballs further out than when he liv'd,

* Staring full ghastly like a strangled man:

' His hair uprear'd, his nostrils stretch'd with struggling;

' His hands abroad display'd, as on that grasp'd

' And tugg'd for life, and was by strength subdu'd.

' Look on the sheets, his hair, you see, is sticking;

' His well-proportion'd beard made rough and rugged,

' Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodg'd.

' It cannot be, but he was murder'd here;

' The least of all these signs were probable.

' Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the Duke to death?

' Myself, and Beaufort, had him in protection;

' And we, I hope, Sir, are no murderers.

' War. But both of you were vow'd Duke Humphrey's foes;

' And you, forsooth, had the good Duke to keep:

' 'Tis like, you would not feast him like a friend;

' And 'tis well seen, he found an enemy.

' Q. Mar. Then you, belike, suspect these noblemen

' As guilty of Duke Humphrey's timeless death.

War. Who finds the heifer dead, and bleeding fresh,

And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,

But will suspect, 'twas he that made the slaughter?

Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest,

But may imagine how the bird was dead,

Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak?

Even so suspicious is this tragedy.

' Q. Mar. Are you the butcher, Suffolk? where's your knife?

Is Beaufort term'd a kite? where are his talons?

Suf. I wear no knife, to slaughter sleeping men;

But here's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease,
That shall be scoured in his rancorous heart,
That slanders me with murder's crimson badge:—
Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwickshire,
That I am faulty in Duke Humphrey's death.

[Exeunt Cardinal, Som. and Others.]

War. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dares him?

Q. Mar. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit,

Nor cease to be an arrogant controller,
Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times.

War. Madam, be still; with reverence may I say;

For every word, you speak in his behalf,
Is slander to your royal dignity.

Suf. Blunt-witted Lord, ignoble in demeanour!

If ever lady wrong'd her Lord so much,
Thy mother took into her blameful bed
Some stern untutor'd churl, and noble stock
Was graft with crabtree slip; whose fruit thou art,
And never of the Nevils' noble race.

War. But that the guilt of murder bucklers thee,

And I should rob the deathsmen of his fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my Sovereign's presence makes me mild,
I would, false murderous coward, on thy knee
Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech,
And say — it was thy mother that thou meant'st,
That thou thyself was born in bastardy:

*And, after all this fearful homage done,
Give thee thy hire, and send thy soul to hell;*

Pernicious bloodsucker of sleeping men!

Suf. Thou shalt be waking, while I shed thy blood,

If from this presence thou dar'st go with me.

War. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence:

* Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope with thee,

* And do some service to Duke Humphrey's ghost.

[Exeunt SUFFOLK and WARWICK.]

* K. Hen. What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted?

* Thrice is he arm'd, that hath his quarrel just;

* And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel,

* Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

[A noise within.]

Q. Mar. What noise is this?

Re-enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK, with their weapons drawn.

* K. Hen. Why, how now, Lords? your wrathful weapons drawn

* Here in our presence? dare you be so bold? —

* Why what tumultuous clamour have we here?

Suf. The traitorous Warwick, with the men of Bury,

Set all upon me, mighty Sovereign.

Noise of a crowd within. Re-enter SALISBURY.

* Sal. Sirs, stand apart; the King shall know your mind. — [Speaking to those within.]

Dread Lord, the commons send you word by me,

Unless false Suffolk straight be done to death,

Or banished fair England's territories,

' They will by violence tear him from your palace,

* And torture him with grievous King'ring death.
They say, by him the good Duke Humphrey died;

* They say, in him they fear your Highness'
death;

* And mere instinct of love, and loyalty, —

* Free from a stubborn opposite intent,

* As being thought to contradict your liking, —

* Makes them thus forward in his banishment.

* They say, in care of your most royal person,

* That, if your Highness should intend to sleep,

* And charge — that no man should disturb your rest,

* In pain of your dislike, or pain of death;

* Yet, notwithstanding such a strait edict,

* Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,

* That sliely glided towards your Majesty,

* It were but necessary you were wak'd;

* Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,

* The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal:

* And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,

* That they will guard you, whe'r you will,
or no,

* From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is;

* With whose envenomed and fatal sting,

* Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,

* They say, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. [within.] An answer from the King,
my Lord of Salisbury.

Suf. 'Tis like, the commons, rude unpolish'd hinds,

*Could send such message to their Sovereign:
But you, my Lord, were glad to be employ'd,
To show how quaint an orator you are:*

But all the honor Salisbury hath won;
Is — that he was the lord ambassador,
Sent from a sort of tinkers to the King.

Commons. [within.] An answer from the King;
or we'll all break in.

K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me,

'I thank them for their tender loving care:
'And had I not been 'cited so by them.
'Yet did I purpose as they do intreat;
'For, sure, my thoughts do hourly prophecy
'Mischaunce unto my state by Suffolk's means.
'And therefore, — by his Majesty I swear,
'Whose far unworthy deputy I am, —
'He shall not breathe infection in this air
'But three days longer, on the pain of death.

[Exit SALISBURY.]

Q. Mar. O Henry, let me plead for gentle
Suffolk!

K. Hen. Ungentle Queen, to call him gentle
Suffolk.

'No more, I say; if thou dost plead for him,
'Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath.
'Had I but said, I would have kept my word;
'But, when I swear, it is irrevocable: —
'If after three days' space, thou here be'st found 'On any ground that I am ruler of,
'The world shall not be ransom for thy life. —
'Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with me;

'I have great matters to impart to thee,
[Exeunt K. HENRY, WARWICK, Lords, &c.]

Q. Mar. Mischaunce, and sorrow, go along with you!

'Heart's discontent, and sour affliction,
'Be playfellow's to keep you company!

' There's two of you; the devil make a third!)

' And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!

* Suf. Cease, gentle Queen, these execrations,

* And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

' Q. Mar. Fie, coward woman, and soft-hearted wretch!

' Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemies?

Suf. A plague upon them! wherefore should I curse them?

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan.

' I would invent as bitter-searching terms,

* As curst, as harsh, and horrible to hear,

Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,

' With full as many signs of deadly hate,

As lean-fac'd Envy in her loathsome cave:

My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words;

Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint;

My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract;

Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban:

And even now my burden'd heart would break,

Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink!

Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they taste!

Their sweetest shade, a grove of cypress trees!

Their chiefest prospect, murdering basilisks!

Their softest touch, as smart as lizards' stings!

Their musick, frightful as the serpent's hiss:

And boding scritch owls make the concert full!

All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell —

Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou torment'st thyself;

* And these dread curses — like the sun 'gainst glass,

* Or like an overcharged gun, — recoil,

* And turn the force of them upon thyself.

You bade me ban, and will you bid me
leave?

by the ground that I am banish'd from,
ould I curse away a winter's night,
standing naked on a mountain top,
biting cold would never let grass grow,
ink it but a minute spent in sport.

Mar. O, let me entreat thee, cease! Give me thy hand,

I may dew it with my mournful tears;
let the rain of heaven wet this place,
wash away my woeful monuments.
ould this kiss be printed in thy hand;

[kisses his hand.]

thou might'st think upon these by the seal, ugh whom a thousand sighs are breath'd for thee!

get thee gone, that I may know my grief;
but surmis'd whilst thou art standing by,
one that surfeits thinking on a want.
I repeal thee, or, be well assur'd, enture to be banished myself:

now farewell; and farewell life with thee!

Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished,
by the King, and three times thrice by thee,
not the land I care for, wert thou hence;
ilderness is populous enough,
Suffolk had thy heavenly company:
where thou art, there is the world itself,

Enter VAUX.

* Q. Mar. Whither goes Vaux so fast?
news, I prythee?

* Vaux. To signify unto his Majesty,
That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death;
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him
That makes him gasp, and stare, and Blaspheming God, and cursing men on Sometime, he talks as if Duke Humphrey

Were by his side; sometime, he calls the
And whispers to his pillow, as to him,
* The secrets of his over-charged soul:
And I am sent to tell his Majesty,
That even now he cries aloud for him.

* Q. Mar. Go, tell this heavy message to King. [Exit V]

Ah me! what is this world? what new these?

* But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure
Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,
And with the southern clouds contend in Theirs for the earth's increase, mine for sorrows?

* Now, get thee hence: The King, thou knowest is coming;

* If thou be found by me, thou art but dead

* Suf. If I depart from thee, I cannot live

' And in thy sight to die, what were it else,
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?
Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
' As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe,
Dying with mother's dug between its lips:
Where, from thy sight, I should be raging mad,
' And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes,
' To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth;
' So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul,
' Or I should breathe it so into thy body,
And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium.
To die by thee, were but to die in jest;
From thee to die, were torture more than death:
O, let me stay, befall what may befall.

' Q. Mar. Away! though parting be a fretful corrosive,
' It is applied to a deathful wound.
' To France, sweet Suffolk: Let me hear from
thee;

' For wheresoe'er thou art in this world's globe,
I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Suf. I go.

Q. Mar. And take my heart with thee.

Suf. A jewel lock'd into the woeful'st cask
That ever did contain a thing of worth.
Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we;
This way fall I to death.

Q. Mar. This way for me.

[Exeunt, severally.]

SECOND PART OF
SCENE III.

London. Cardinal Beaufort's Bed-chamber.

Enter Kind HENRY, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and Others. The Cardinal in bed; Attend- ants with him.

* K. Hen. How fares my Lord? speak, Beaufort, to thy Sovereign.

* Car. If thou be'st death, I'll give thee England's treasure,

* Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.

* K. Hen. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
When death's approach is seen so terrible!

* War. Beaufort, it is thy Sovereign speaks to thee.

* Car. Bring me unto my trial when you will.
Died he not in his bed? where should he die?

* Can I make men live, where they will or no? —
O! torture me no more, I will confess. —

* Alive again? then show me where he is;
I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him. —

* He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them. — Comb down his hair; look! look! it stands upright, —

* Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul! —
Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary
Bring the strong poison that I bought of him.

* K. Hen. O thou eternal Mover of the heave!

* Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch!

* O, beat away the busy meddling fiend,
That lays strong siege unto this wretch's so

* And from his bosom purge this black, —

War. See, how the pangs of death do make him grin.

* Sal. Disturb him not, let him pass peaceably:

* K. Hen. Peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure be!

Lord Cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss,
'Hold up thy hand', make signal of thy hope. —

'He dies, and makes no sign; O God, forgive
him!

* War. So bad a death argues a monstrous life.

* K. Hen. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all. —

'Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain close;
'And let us all to meditation. [Exeunt.

ACT IV. SCENE I.

Kent. The Sea-shore near Dover.

Firing heard at sea. Then enter from a boat, a Captain, a Master, a Master's-Mate, Walter Whitmore, and Others; with them SUR-VOLX, and other Gentlemen prisoners.

* Cap. The gaudy, blabbing, and remorse-ful day

* Is crept into the bosom of the sea;

* And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades

* That drag the tragick melancholy night;

* Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging
wings

* Clip dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws

- * Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air.
- * Therefore, bring forth the soldiers of our prize;
- * For, whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs,
- * Here shall they make their ransom on the sand,
- * Or with their blood stain this discolour'd shore. —
- ‘ Master, this prisoner freely give I thee; —
- ‘ And thou that art his mate, make boot of this; —
- ‘ The other, [pointing to Suffolk,] Walter Whitmore, is thy share.
- ‘ 1. Gent. What is my ransom, Master? let me know.
- ‘ Mast. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head.
- ‘ Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.
- * Cap. What, think you much to pay two thousand crowns,
- * And bear the name and port of gentlemen? —
- * Cut both the villains’ throats; — for die you shall;
- * The lives of those which we have lost in fight,
- * Cannot be counterpois’d with such a petty sum.
- * 1. Gent. I’ll give it, Sir; and therefore spare my life.
- * 2. Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight.
- ‘ Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard,
- ‘ And therefore, to revenge it, shalt thou die; [to Suf.]
- ‘ And so should these, if I might have my will.
- * Cap. Be not so rash; take ransom, let him live.
- ‘ Suf. Look on my George, I am a gentleman;

'Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.

'Whit. And so am I; my name is — Walter Whitmore.

'How now? why start'st thou? what, doth death affright?

'Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death.

'A cunning man did calculate my birth,

'And told me — that by Water I should die:

'Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded;

'Thy name is — Gualtier, being rightly sounded.

'Whit. Gualtier, or Walter, which it is,
I care not;

'Ne'er yet did base dishonour blur our name,

'But with our sword we wip'd away the blot;

'Therefore, when merchantlike I sell revenge,

'Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defac'd,

'And I proclaim'd a coward through the world!

[lays hold on Suffolk,

'Suf. Stay, Whitmore; for thy prisoner is a Prince;

The Duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.

'Whit. The Duke of Suffolk, muffled up in rags!

Suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the Duke;

Jove sometime went disguis'd, And why not I?

Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be.

'Suf. Obscure and lowly swain, King Henry's blood,

The honourable blood of Lancaster,

'Must not be shed by such a jaded groom.

Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand, and held my stirrup?

'Barheaded plodded by my foot-cloth mule,
'And thought thee happy when I shook my head?

- ' How often hast thou waited at my cup,
 ' Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,
 ' When I have feasted with Queen Margaret?
 * Remember it, and let it make thee crest-fall'n;
 * Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride:
 * How in our voiding lobby hast thou stood,
 * And duly waited for my coming forth?
 ' This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf,
 ' And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.
 * Whit. Speak, Captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain?
 * Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.
 * Suf. Base slave! thy words are blunt, and so art thou.
 ' Cap. Convey him hence, and on our long-boat's side
 ' Strike off his head.
 Suf. Thou dar'st not for thy own.
 Cap. Yes, Poole.
 Suf. Poole?
 Cap. Poole? Sir Poole? Lord?
 ' Ay, kennel, puddle, sink; whose filth and dirt
 ' Troubles the silver spring where England drinks.
 ' Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth,
 ' For swallowing the treasure of the realm:
 ' Thy lips, that kiss'd the Queen, shall sweep
 the ground;
 ' And thou, that smil'dst at good Duke Humphrey's death,
 ' Against the senseless winds shalt grin in vain,
 * Who, in contempt, shall hiss at thee again:
 * And wedded be thou to the hags of hell,
 * For daring to affy a mighty lord

- * Unto the daughter of a worthless King,
- * Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem.
- * By devilish policy art thou grown great,
- * And, like ambitious Sylla, overgorg'd
- * With gobbets of thy mother's bleeding heart.
- * By thee, Anjon and Maine were sold to France:
- * The false revolting Normans, thorough thee,
- * Disdain to call us lord; and Picardy
- * Hath slain their governors, surpriz'd our forts,
- * And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home.
- * The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all, —
- * Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain, —
- * As hating thee, are rising up in arms:
- * And now the house of York — thrust from
the crown,
- * By shameful murder of a guiltless King,
- * And lofty proud encroaching tyranny, —
- * Burns with revenging fire; whose hopeful colours
- * Advance with our half-fac'd sun, striving to shine,
- * Under the which is writ — Invitis nubibus,
- * The commons here in Kent are up in arms:
- * And, to conclude, reproach, and beggary,
- * Is crept into the palace of our King,
- * And all by thee: — Away, convey him hence.
- * Suf. O that I were a god, to shoot forth thunder
- * Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges!
- * Small things make base men proud: 'this villain here,
- * Being captain of a pinnace, threatens more
- * Than Bargulus the strong Illyrian pirate.
- * Drones suck not eagles' blood, but rob beehives:

' It is impossible, that I should die
 ' By such a lowly vassal as thyself,
 ' Thy words move rage, and not remorse, in me:
 ' I go of message from the Queen to France;
 ' I charge thee, waft me safely cross the channel.

' Cap. Walter, —

' Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy death.

' * Suf. Gelidus timor occupat artus: — 'tis thee I fear,

' Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear, before
I leave thee.

' What, are ye daunted now? now will ye stoop?

' 1. Gent. My gracious Lord, entreat him, speak him fair,

' Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough,

' Us'd to command, untaught to plead for favour,

' Far be it, we should honour such as these

' With humble suit: no, rather let my head

' Stoop to the block, than these knees bow to any,

' Save to the God of heaven, and to my King;

' And sooner dance upon a bloody pole,

' Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom.

* True nobility is exempt from fear: —

* More can I bear, than you dare execute.

' Cap. Hail him away, and let him talk no more.

' Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye can,

' That this my death may never be forgot!

' Great men oft die by vile bezoniaps:

' A Roman sworder and banditto slave,

' Murder'd sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand

' Stabb'd Julius Caesar; savage islanders,

' Pompey the great: and Suffolk dies by pirates.

[Exit. Suf. with Whitmore and others.]

Cap. And as for these, whose ransom we have set,

It is our pleasure, one of them depart: —

Therefore come you with us, and let him go.

[Exeunt all but the first Gentleman.]

Re-enter WHITMORE, with Suffolk's body.

' Whit. There let his head and lifeless body lie,

' Until the Queen his mistress bury it. [Exit.]

' 1. Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle!

' His body will I bear unto the King:

' If he revenge it not, yet will his friends;

' So will the Queen, that living held him dear.

[Exit, with the body.]

SCENE II.

Blackheath.

Enter George Bevis and John Holland.

' Geo. Come, and get thee a sword, though
' made of a lath; they have been up these two ' days.

' John. They have the more need to sleep
' now then.

' Geo. I tell thee, Jack Cade the clothier means ' to dress the common wealth, and turn it, and
' set a new nap upon it.

John. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare.
Well, I say, it was never merry world in England, since gentlemen came up.

* Geo. O miserable age! Virtue is not regard* ed in handicrafts-men.

* John. The nobility think scorn to go in lea* ther aprons.

* Geo. Nay more, the King's council are n-
 * good workmen.

* John. True; And yet it is said, — Labour
 * in thy vocation: which is as much as to say
 * as, — let the magistrates be labouring men
 * and therefore should we be magistrates.

* Geo. Thou hast hit it: for there is no better
 * sign of a brave mind, than a hard hand.

* John. I see them! I see them! There's Best
 * son, the tanner of Wingham; —

* Geo. He shall have the skins of our enemies
 * to make dog's leather of.

John. And Dick the butcher, —

* Geo. Then is sin struck down like an ox
 * and iniquity's throat cut like a calf.

* John. And Smith the weaver: —

* Geo. Argo, their thread of life is spun.

* John. Come, come, let's fall in with them

Drum. Enter CADE, DICK the butcher, SMITH
 the weaver, and others in great number.

* Cade. We John Cade, so term'd of our sup* posed father, —

Dick. Or rather, of stealing a cade of herrings;
 [Aside

* Cade. — for our enemies shall fall before us
 * inspired with the spirit of putting down King
 * and Princes, — Command silence.

Dick. Silence!

Cade. My father was a Mortimer, —

Dick. He was an honest man, and a good bricklayer. [Aside.]

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet, —

Dick. I knew her well, she was a midwife. [Aside.]

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies, —

Dick. She was, indeed, a pedlar's daughter, and sold many laces. [Aside.]

Smith. But, now of late, not able to travel with her furr'd pack, she washes bucks here at home. [Aside.]

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable house.

Dick. Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable; and there was he born, under a hedge; for his father had never a house but the cage. [Aside.]

* Cade. Valiant I am.

* Smith. 'A must needs; for beggary is valiant. [Aside.]

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Dick. No question of that; for I have seen him whipp'd three market days together. [Aside.]

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.

Smith. He need not fear the sword, for his coat is of proof. [Aside.]

Dick. But, methinks, he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt i'the hand for stealing of sheep. [Aside.]

Cade. Be brave then; for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be, in England, seven half-penny leaves sold for a penny: the three hoop'd pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felony, to drink small beer: all the realm shall be in common, and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass. And, when I am King, (as King I will be) —

All. God save your Majesty!

Cade. I thank you, good people: — there shall be no money; all shall eat and drink on my score; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers, and worship me their lord.

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man? Some say a the bee stings: but I say, 'tis the bee's wax; for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. How now? who's there?

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham?

Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read, and cast account.

Cade. O monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of boy's copies.

Cade. Here's a villain!

Smith. He's a book in his pocket, with red letters in't.

Cade. Nay, then he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligations, and write court-hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a proper man, on mine honour; unless I find him guilty, he shall not die. — Come hither, sirrah, I must examine thee: What is thy name?

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters; — 'Twill go hard with you.

' Cade. Let me alone: — Dost thou use to write thy name; or hast thou a mark to thyself, like an honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up, that I can write my name.

' All. He hath confess'd: away with him; he's a villain, and a traitor.

' Cade. Away with him, I say: hang him with his pen and inkhorn about his neck.

[Exeunt some with the Clerk.]

Enter MICHAEL.

' Mich. Where's our general?

' Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

' Mich. Fly, fly, fly! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the King's forces.

' Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down: He shall be encounter'd with a man as good as himself: He is but a knight, is 'a?

' Mich. No.

' Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently; Rise up sir John Mortimer. Now have at him, Enter sir Humphrey STAFFORD, and William his Brother, with drum and forces.

* Staf. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent,

* Mark'd for the gallows, — lay your weapons down,

* Home to your cottages, forsake this groom; —

* The King is merciful, if you revolt.

* W. Staf. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd to blood,

SECOND PART OF

* If you go forward: therefore yield, or die.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not;

It is to you, good people, that I speak,

* O'er whom, in time to come, I hope reign;

* For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

* Staf. Villain, thy father was a plasterer;

* And thou thyself, a shearmau, Art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a gardener.

* W. Staf. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this: — Edmund Mortimer,
Earl of March,

Married the Duke of Clarence' daughter; Did he not?

* Staf. Ay, Sir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

W. Staf. That's false.

* Cade. Ay, there's the question; but, I say
'tis true:

* The elder of them, being put to nurse,

* Was by a beggar-woman stol'n away;

* And, ignorant of his birth and parentage,

* Became a bricklayer, when he came to age:

* His son am I; deny it, if you can.

Dick. Nay, 'tis too true; therefore he shall be King.

Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it; therefore, deny it not.

* Staf. And will you credit this base drudge's
words,

* That speaks he knows not what?

* All. Ay, marry, will we; therefore get ye gone.

W. Staf. Jack Cade, the Duke of York hath taught you this.

* Cade. He lies, for I invented it myself.
 [Aside.] — Go to, sirrah, Tell the King from me, that — for his father's sake, Henry the fifth, in whose time boys went to span-counter for French crowns, — I am content he shall reign;
 but I'll be Protector over him.

* Dick. And, furthermore, we'll have the lord
 Say's head, for selling the dukedome of Maine.

* Cade. And good reason; for thereby is England maim'd, and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow Kings, I tell you, that that lord Say hath gelded the commonwealth, and made it an eunuch: and more than that he can speak French, and therefore he is a traitor.

* Staf. O gross and miserable ignorance!

* Cade. Nay, answer, if you can: The Frenchmen are our enemies: go to then, I ask but this; Can he, that speaks with the tongue of an enemy, be a good counsellor, or no?

* All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his head.

* W. Staf. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail,

* Assail them with the army of the King.

* Staf. Herald, away; and, throughout every town,

* Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade;
 * That those, which fly before the battle ends,
 * May, even in their wives' and children's sight,
 * Be hang'd up for example at their doors: —

* And you, that be the King's friends, follow me.

[Exeunt the two STAFFORDS, and forces.]

* Cade. And you, that love the commons, follow me. —

* Now show yourselves men, 'tis for liberty.

[Exeunt.

S C E N E III.

Another Part of Blackheath.

Alarums. The two parties enter, and fight, and both the Staffords are slain.

Cade: Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?

'Dick. Here, Sir.

‘ Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and ‘ oxen, and thou behav’dst thyself as if thou hadst ‘ been in thine own slaughter-house: therefore ‘ thus will I reward thee, — The Lent shall be
‘ as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a ‘ licence to kill for a hundred lacking one.

' Dick, I desire no more.

* Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deserv'st
* no less. This monument of the victory will I * bear; and the bodies shall be dragg'd at my * horse' heels, till I do come to London, where
* we will have the mayor's sword borne be-
* fore us.

* Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good,
* break open the gaols, and let out the prisoners.

* Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London. [Exeunt.

S C E N E IV.

London. A Room in the Palace.

*Enter King HENRY, reading a supplication;
the Duke of BUCKINGHAM, and lord SAY with him: at a distance, Queen MARGARET, mourning over SUFFOLK's head.*

* Q. Mar. Oft have I heard — that grief softens the mind,

* And makes it fearful and degenerate;

* Think therefore on revenge, and cease to weep.

* But who can cease to weep, and look on this?

* Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast:

* But where's the body that I should embrace?

* Buck. What answer makes your Grace to the 'rebels' supplication?

* K. Hen. I'll send some holy Bishop to entreat:

* For God forbid, so many simple souls

* Should perish by the sword! And I myself,

* Rather than bloody war shall cut them short,

* Will parley with Jack Cade their general. —

* But stay, I'll read it over once again.

* Q. Mar. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face

* Rul'd, like a wandering planet, over me;

* And could it not enforce them to relent,

* That were unworthy to behold the same?

* K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

SECOND PART OF

Say. Ay, but I hope, your Highness shall have his.

K. Hen. How now, Madam? Still
Lamenting, and mourning for Suffolk's death?
I fear, my love, if that I had been dead,
Thou wouldest not have mourn'd so much for me.

Q. Mar. No, my love, I should not mourn but die for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

* K. Hen. How now! what news? why com'st thou in such haste?

* Mes. The rebels are in Southwark. Fly my Lord.

* Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer,
* Descended from the Duke of Clarence' house
* And calls your Grace usurper, openly,
* And vows to crown himself in Westminster.
* His army is a ragged multitude
* Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless:
* Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death
* Hath given them heart and courage to proceed
* All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen,
* They call — false caterpillars, and intend their death.

* K. Hen. O graceless men! they know no what they do.

* Buck. My gracious Lord, retire to Kenelworth;

Until a power be rais'd to put them down.

* Q. Mar. Ah! were the Duke of Suffolk now alive,

* These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd

* K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee,
There-

Therefore away with us to Kenelworth.

Say. So might your Grace's person be in danger;

The sight of me is odious in their eyes;

And therefore in this city will I stay,

And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

* 2. Mes. Jack Cade hath gotten London-bridge;
the citizens

* Fly and forsake their houses:

* The rascal people, thirsting after prey,

* Join with the traitor; and they jointly swear,

* To spoil the city, and your royal court.

* Buck. Then linger not, my Lord; away, take horse.

* K. Hen. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us.

* Q. Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceas'd.

* K. Hen. Farewel, my Lord; [to Lord Say.] trust not the Kentish rebels.

* Buck. Trust no body, for fear you be betray'd.

* Say. The trust I have is in mine innocence,
And therefore am I bold and resolute. [Exeunt.]

S C E N E V.

The same. The Tower.

*Enter Lord Scales, and Others, on the walls.
Then enter certain Citizens, below.*

Scales. How now? is Jack Cade slain?

1. Cit. No, my Lord, nor likely to be slain for they have won the bridge, killing all that withstand them: The lord mayor cries of your honour from the tower, to defy city from the rebels.

Scales. Such aid as I can spare, your command;

But I am troubled here with them myself. The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower. But get you to Smithfield, and gather head. And thither I will send you Matthew Goun. Fight for your King, your country, and lives;

And so farewell, for I must hence again.

SCENE VI.

The same. Cannon-Street.

Enter Jack Cade, and his followers. He holds his staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge you by command, that, of the city's cost, the conduit run nothing but claret wine this year of our reign. And now, henceforward shall be treason for any that calls me other than Lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running.

Sol. Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade. Knock him down there. [They kill

 Smith.* If this fellow be wise, he'll all you Jack Cade more; I think, he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My Lord, there's an army gather'd together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come then, let's go fight with them: first, go and set London-bridge on fire; if you can; burn down the Tower too. Well, let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.

The same. Smithfield.

Drum. Enter, on one side, CADE and his company; on the other, Citizens, and the King's forces, headed by Matthew Gough. They fight; the citizens are routed, and Matthew Gough is slain.

Cade. So, Sirs: — Now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to the inns of court; and so on with them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your Lordship.

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shall have it for that word.

Dick. Only, that the laws of England may come out of your mouth.

John. Mass, 'twill be sore law then; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet. [Aside.]

Smith. Nay, John, it will be sinking law; for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese. [Aside.]

Cade. I have thought upon it, it shall be so.

SECOND PART OF

' Away, burn all the records of the realm; 1
' mouth shall be the parliament of England.

* John. Then we are like to have biting s
' tutes, unless his teeth be pull'd out. of Asi

* Cade. And henceforward all things shall in common.

Enter a Messenger.

' Mes. My Lord, a prize, a prize! here's ' lord Say, which sold the towns in Fran
' he that made us pay one and twenty fiftee
' and one shilling to the pound, the last sub

.. Enter George Bevis, with the Lord Say.

' Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it
' times. — Ah, thou say, thou serge, say, d
' buckram lord! now art thou within poi
' blank of our jurisdiction regal. What ca
' thou answer to my majesty, for giving up
' Normandy unto mounsieur Basimecu, the d
' phin of France? Be it known unto thee
' these presence, even the presence of lord M
' timer, that I am the besom that must sw
' the court clean of such filth as thou art. T
' hast most traitorously corrupted the youth
' the realm, in erecting a grammar-school;
' whereas, before, our fore-fathers had no o
' books but the score and the tally, thou
' caused printing to be used; and, contrar
' the King, his crown, and dignity, thou ' built a paper-mill. It will be proved to ' face, thou hast men about thee, that usu
' talk of a noun, and a verb; and such abon
' able words, as no christian ear can endur
' hear. Thou hast appointed justices of pe to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison; and, because they could not read, thou hast hang'd them; when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride on a foot-cloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou ought'st not to let thy horse wear a cloak when honest men than thou go in their hose and doublets.

* Dick. And work in their shirt too; as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent, —

* Dick. What say you of Kent?

* Say. Nothing but this: 'Tis bona terra, mala gens.

* Cade. Away with him, away with him! he speaks Latin.

* Say. Hear me but speak, and hear me where you will.

* Kent, in the Commentaries Caesar writ,

\ ' Is term'd the civil'st place of all this isle:

' Sweet is the country, because full of riches;

' The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy;

' Which makes me hope you are not void of pity.

' I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy;

* Yet, to recover them, would lose my life.

* Justice with favour have I always done;

* Prayers and tears have mov'd me, gifts could never.

* When have I aught exacted at your hands,

* Kent to maintain, the King, the realm, and you?

* Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks,

- * Because my book preferr'd me to the King:
- * And — seeing ignorance is the curse of God,
- * Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven, —
- * Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits,
- * You cannot but forbear to murder me.
- * This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign Kings.
- * For your behoof, —
- * Cade. Tut! when struck'st thou one blow in the field?
- * Say. Great men have reaching hands; oft have I struck
- * Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.
- * Geo. O monstrous coward! what, to come behind folks?
- * Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for your good.
- * Cade. Give him a box o' the ear, and that will make 'em red again.
- * Say. Long sitting to determine poor men's causes
- * Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.
- * Cade. Ye shall have a hempo caudle then,
- * and the pap of a hatchet.
- * Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?
- * Say. The palsy, and not fear, provoketh me.
- * Cade. Nay, he nods at us; as who should say, I'll be even with you. I'll see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no: Take him away, and behead him.
- * Say. Tell me, wherein I have offended most?
- * Have I affected wealth or honour; speak?
- * Are my chests fill'd up with extorted gold?
- * Is my apparel sumptuous to behold?
- * Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my death?

* These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding,

* This breast from harbouring foul deceitful
thoughts.

* O, let me live!

* Cade. I feel remorse in myself with his words: but I'll bridle it; he shall die, and it be but for pleading so well for his life. Away with him! he has a familiar under his tongue;
he speaks not o' God's name. 'Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently;
and then break into his son-in-law's house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither.

* All. It shall be done.

* Say. Ah, countrymen! if when you make your prayers,

* God should be so obdurate as yourselves,

* How would it fare with your departed souls?

* And therefore yet relent, and save my life.

* Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye. [Exeunt some, with Lord SAY.

* The proudest Peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute; there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead ere they have it: Men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command, that their wives be as free as heart can wish, or tongue can tell.

* Dick. My Lord, when shall we go to Cheapside, and take up commodities upon our bills?

* Cade. Marry, presently.

* All. O brave!

Re-enter Rebels, with the heads of Lord SAY and his son-in-law.

Cade. But is not this braver? → Let them kiss one another, for they loved well, when they were alive. Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night: for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets; and, at every corner, have them kiss. — Away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

Southwark.

Alarum. Enter CADE, and all his rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish-street! down saint Magnus' corner! kill and knock down! throw them into Thames! —

[A parley sounded, then a retreat.]

What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill?

Enter BUCKINGHAM, and old CLIFFORD, with forces.

Buck. Ay, here they be that dare, and will disturb thee:

Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the King

Unto the commons, whom thou hast misled;
And here pronounce free pardon to them all,

' That will forsake thee, and go home in peace.

' Clif. What say ye, countrymen? will ye relent,

' And yield to mercy, whilst 'tis offer'd you;

' Or let a rabble lead you to your deaths?

' Who loves the King, and will embrace his pardon,

' Fling up his cap, and say — God save his Majesty!

' Who hateth him, and honours not his father,

' Henry the fifth, that made all France to quake,

' Shake he his weapon at us, and pass by.

' All. God save the King! God save the King?

' Cade. What, Buckingham, and Clifford, are ye so brave? — And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hang'd with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London Gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought, you would never have given out these arms, till you had recover'd your ancient freedom: but you are all recreants, and dastards; and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces:
For me, — I will make shift for one; and so — God's curse 'light upon you all!

' All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade.

' Clif. Is Cade the son of Henry the fifth,

' Thus thus you do exclaim — you'll go with
him?

' Will he conduct you through the heart of France,
And make the meanest of you Earls and Dukes?

' Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to;

' Nor knows he how to live, but by the spoil,

- ' Unless by robbing of your friends, and us.
 ' Wer't not a shame, that, whilst you live at jar,
 ' The fearful French, whom you late vanquished,
 ' Should make a start o'er seas, and vanquish
 you?
 ' Methinks, already, in this civil broil,
 ' I see them lording it in London streets,
 ' Crying — Villageois: unto all they meet.
 ' Better, ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry,
 ' Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy.
 ' To France, to France, and get what you have lost;
 ' Spare England, for it is your native coast:
 ' Henry hath money, you are strong and manly;
 ' God on our side doubt not of victory.
 ' All A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the ' King, and Clifford.
 ' Cade. Was ever feather so lightly blown to ' and fro, as this multitude? the name of Henry
 ' the fifth hales them to an hundred mischiefs,
 ' and makes them leave me desolate. I see them
 ' lay their heads together, to surprize me: my
 ' sword make way for me, for here is no staying.
 ' — In despite of the devils and hell, have ' through the very midst of you! and heavens
 ' and honour be witness, that no want of resolu' tion in me, but only my followers' base and ' ignominious treasons, makes me betake me to
 ' my heels. [Exit.
 ' Buck. What, is he fled? go some, and follow him;
 ' And he, that brings his head unto the King,
 ' Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward.—
 [Exitunt some of them.

‘ Follow me, soldiers; we’ll devise a mean
‘ To reconcile you all unto the King. [Exeunt.]

· S C E ' N E I X .

Kenelworth Castle.

Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, and SOMERSET, on the terrace of the Castle.

* K. Hen. Was ever King, that joy'd an earthly throne,
* And could command no more content than I?
* No sooner was I crept out of my cradle,
* But I was made a King, at nine months old:
* Was never subject long'd to be a King,
* As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and CLIFFORD.

* Buck. Health, and glad tidings, to your Majesty!
 * K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor Cade surpriz'd?
 * Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter, below, a great number of Cade's followers, with halters about their necks.

‘ Clif. He’s fled, my Lord, and all his powers do yield;
‘ And humbly thus with halters on their necks
‘ Expect your Highness’ doom, of life, or death.
‘ K. Hen. Then, heaven, set ope thy everlasting gates,

'To entertain my vows of thanks and praise! —
 Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives;
 And show'd how well you love your Prince and country:
 Continue still in this so good a mind,
 And Henry, though he be infortunate,
 Assure yourselves, will never be unkind:
 And so, with thanks, and pardon to you all,
 I do dismiss you to your several countries.
All. God save the King! God save the King!

Enter a Messenger.

* Mes. Please it your Grace to be advertised,
 * The Duke of York is newly come from Ireland:
 * And with a puissant and a mighty power,
 * Of Gallowglasses, and stout Kernes,
 * Is marching hitherward in proud array;
 * And still proclaimeth, as he comes along,
 * His arms are only to remove from thee
 * The Duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor.
 * K. Hen. Thus stands my state, twixt Cade and York distress'd;
 * Like to a ship, that, having 'scap'd a tempest,
 * Is straightway calm'd, and boarded with a pirate:
 * But now is Cade driven back, his men dis-pers'd;
 * And now is York in arms, to second him; —
 * I pray thee, Buckingham, go and meet him;
 * And ask him, what's the reason of these arms.
 * Tell him, I'll send Duke Edmund to the Tower; —
 * And, Somerset, we will commit thee thither.

- * Until this army be dismiss'd from him.
- * Som. My lord;
- * I'll yield myself to prison willingly,
- * Or unto death, to do my country good.
- * K. Hen. In any case, be not too rough in terms;
- * For he is fierce, and cannot brook hard language.
- * Buck. I will, my Lord; and doubt not so to deal;
- * As all things shall redound unto your good.
- * K. Hen. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better;
- * For yet may England curse my wretched reign.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE X.

Kent. Iden's Garden.

Enter CADE.

- * Cade. Fie on ambition! fie on myself; that * have a sword, and yet am ready to famish!
- * These five days have I hid me in these woods;
- * and durst not peep out, for all the country is
- * lay'd for me; but now am I so hungry, that
- * if I might have a lease of my life for a thou-
- * sand years, I could stay no longer. Wherefore,
- * on a brickwall have I climb'd into this garden;
- * to see if I can eat grass, or pick a sallet an-
- * other while, which is not amiss to cool a man's
- * stomach this hot weather. And, I think, this
- * word sallet was born to do me good: for, many
- * a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pau had
- * been cleft with a brown bill; and many a time

* when I have been dry, and bravely marching,
 * it hath served me instead of a quart-pot to drink
 * in; and now the word sallet must serve me to * feed on.

Enter IDEN, with Servants.

* Iden. Lord, who would live turmoiled in the court,

* And may enjoy such quiet walks as these?
 * This small inheritance, my father left me,
 * Contenteth me, and is worth a monarchy.
 * I seek not to wax great by others' waining;
 * Or gather wealth, I care not with what envy;
 * Sufficeth, that I have maintains my state,
 * And sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

* Cade. Here's the lord of the soil come to * seize me for a stray, for entering his fee-simple * without leave. Ah, villain, thou wilt be* tray me, and get a thousand crowns of the King
 * for carrying my head to him; but I'll make
 * thee eat iron like an ostridge, and swallow my
 * sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

* Iden. Why, rude companion, whatso'er thou be,

* I know thee not; Why then should I betray thee?
 * Is't not enough, to break into my garden,
 * And, like a thief, to come to rob my grounds,
 * Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner,
 * But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms?

Cade. Brave thee? ay, by the best blood that ever was broach'd, and beard thee too. Look on me well: I have eat no meat these five days; yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door-nail, I pray God, I may never eat grass more.

Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England stands,

That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent,
Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man.

' Oppose thy stedfast-gazing eyes to mine,
' See if thou canst outface me with thy looks.
' Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser;
' Thy hand is but a finger to my fist;
' Thy leg a stick, compared with this truncheon;
' My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast;

' And if mine arm be heaved in the air,
' Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth.
' As for more words, whose greatness answers
words,

' Let this my sword report what speech forbears.

* Cade. By my valour, the most complete
* champion that ever I heard. — ' Steel, if thou
' turn the edge, or cut not out the burly-boned
' clown in chine of beef ere thou sleep in thy
' sheath, I beseech God on my knees, thou may'st
' be turn'd to hobnails, [They fight. Cade falls.]
' O, I am slain! famine, and no other, hath ' slain me: let ten thousand devils come against
' me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost,
' and I'd defy them all. Wither, garden; and
' be henceforth a burying-place to all that do
' dwell in this house, because, the unconquer'd
' soul of Cade is fled.

' Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor?

' Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,
' And hang thee o'er my tomb, when I am dead:
' Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point;
' But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat,
' To emblaze the honour that thy master got.

SECOND PART OF

Code. Iden, farewell: and be proud of thy victory: Tell Kent from me she hath lost her best man; and exhort all the world to be cowards; for I, that never fear'd any, am requish'd by famine, not by valour. [Dies]

* Iden. How much thou wrong'st me, heaven knows: I shall be my judge. [Exit]

* Die, damned wretch, the curse tis he that hars thee!

* And as I thrust thy body in with my sword,

* So wish I, I might thrust thy soul to hell.

* Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels.

* Unto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave;

* And there cut off thy most ungracious head;

* Which I will bear in triumph to the King.

* Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon.

[Exit, dragging out the body.]

ACT V. SCENE I.

The same. Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

The King's Camp on one side. On the other enter York attended, with drum and colours: his forces at some distance.

* York. From Ireland thus comes York, to claim his right,

* And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head:

* Ring, bells, aloud; burn, bonfires, clear and bright,

* To entertain great England's lawful King.

Ab.

Ab, sancta majestas! Who would not buy thee dear?

' Let them obey, ~~that~~ know not how to rule;
' This hand was made to handle nought but gold:
' I cannot give due action to my words,
' Except a sword, or scepter, balance it.
' A scepter shall it have, have I a soul;
' On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

' Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me?

' The King hath sent him, sure: I must dissemble.
' Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

' York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting.

' Art thou a Messenger, or come of pleasure?

' Buck. A Messenger from Henry, our dread Liege,

' To know the reason of these arms in peace;
' Or why, thou — being a subject as I am, —
' Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn,
' Should'st raise so great a power without his leave,

' Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

' York. Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great.

' O, I could hew up rocks, and fight with flint;

' I am so angry at these abject terms;

' And now, like Ajax Telamonius,

' On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury!

Aside.

' I am far better born than is the King;

SECOND PART OF

‘ More like a King, more kingly in my thoughts :

But I must shake fair weather yet a while.

'Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong. —

' O Buckingham, I pr'ythee, pardon me,

‘ That I have given no answer all this while ;

My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.

‘ The cause why I have brought this army hither,

'Is—to remove proud Somerset from the King,

‘ Seditious to his Grace, and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy part :

‘ But if thy arms be to no other end,’

'The King hath yielded unto thy demand:'

The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?

Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

‘ York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers. —

'Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves;

‘Meet me to-morrow in saint George’s field.

' You shall have pay, and ever thing you wish.—

* And let my Sovereign, virtuous Henry,

* Command my eldest son, — nay, all my sons,

* As pledges of my fealty and love,

* I'll send them all as willing as I live;

* Lands, goods, horse, armour, any thing I have

* Is his to use, so Somerset may die.

Buck. York, I commend this kind submission:

'We twain will go into his Highness' tent.

Enter King HENRY, attended.

- ' K. Hen. Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us,
' That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm?
' * York. In all submission and humility,
' * York doth present himself unto your Highness.
' * K. Hen. Then what intend these forces thou dost bring?
' * York. To heave the traitor Somerset from
hence?
' And fight against that monstrous rebel, Cade,
' Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter IDEN, with Cade's head.

- ' * Iden. If one so rude, and of so mean condition,
' May pass into the presence of a King,
' Lo, I present your Grace a traitor's head,
' The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.
' * K. Hen. The head of Cade? — Great God, how just art thou! —
' O, let me view his visage being dead,
' That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.
' Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew him?
' * Iden. I was, an't like your Majesty.
' * K. Hen. How art thou call'd? and what is thy degree?
' * Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name;
' A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his King.
' * Buck. So please it you, my Lord, 'twere not amiss
' * He were created knight for his good service.
' * K. Hen. Iden, kneel down; [he kneels.]
Rise up a knight.

' We give thee for reward a thousand marks;

And will, that thou henceforth attend on us.

Idem. May Idem live to merit such a bounty,

And never live but true unto his Liege!

K. Hen. See, Buckingham! Somerset comes with the Queen;

'Go, bid her hide him quickly from the Duke.

Enter Queen MARGARET and SOMERSET.

Q. Mar. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head,

‘ But boldly stand, and front him to his face.

York. How now! Is Somerset at liberty?

Then, York, unloose thy long-imprison'd
thoughts.

‘ And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.’

‘ Shall I endure the sight of Somerset? —

' False King! why hast thou broken faith with me,

‘Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?’

'King did I call thee? no, thou art not King;

' Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,

'Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor.

' That head of thine doth not become a crown;

'Thy hand is made to grasp a palmier's staff,

And not to grace an awful princely scepter.

‘That gold must round engirt these brows of mine;

Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear,

Is able with the change to kill and cure.

' Here is a hand to hold a scepter up,

And with the same to act controlling laws.

Give place; by heaven, thou shalt rule no more

' O'er him, whom heaven created for thy ruler.

' Som. O monstrous traitor! — I arrest thee,
York,

' Of capital treason 'gainst the King and crown:

* Ohey, audacious traitor; kneel for grace.

* York. Would'st have me kneel? first let me ask of these,

* If they can brook I bow a knee to man. —

* Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail;

[Exit an Attend.]

* I know, ere they will have me go to ward,

* They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchise-ment

Q. Mar. Call hither Clifford; bid him come again, [Exit BUCKINGHAM.]

* To say, if that the bastard boys of York

* Shall be the surety for their traitor father.

* York. O blood-bespotted Neapolitan,

* Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge!

' The sons of York, thy betters in their birth,

' Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those

' That for my surety will refuse the boys.

Enter EDWARD and RICHARD PLANTAGENET, with forces, at one side; at the other, with forces also, old CLIFFORD and his son.

* See, where they come; I'll warrant, they'll make it good.

* Q. Mar. And here comes Clifford, to deny their bail.

' Clif. Health and all happiness to my lord
the King! [Kneels.]

' York. I thank thee, Clifford: Say, what news with thee?

' Nay, do not fright us with an angry look:

We are thy Sovereign, Clifford, kneel again;

' For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee.

' Clif. This is my King, York, I do not mistake;

' But thou mistak'st me much, to think I do: —

' To Bedlam with him; is the man grown mad?

' K. Hen. Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and ambitious humour

' Makes him oppose himself against his King.

' Clif. He is a traitor, let him to the Tower,

' And chop away that factious pate of his.

' Q. Mar. He is arrested, but will not obey;

' His sons, he says, shall give their words for him.

' York. Will you not, sons?

' Edw. Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.

' Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall.

* Clif. Why, what a brood of traitors have we here!

* York. Look in a glass, and call thy image so;

* I am thy King, and thou a false-heart traitor.—

' Call hither to the stake my two brave bears,

* That, with the very shaking of their chains,

* They may astonish these fell lurking curs;

* Bid Salisbury, and Warwick, come to me.

Drums. Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY, with forces.

' Clif. Are these thy bears? we'll bait thy bears to death,

' And manacle the bear-ward in their chains,

' If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting-place.

* Rich. Oft have I seen a hot o'erweening cur Run back and bite, because he was withheld;

- * Who, being suffer'd with the bear's fell paw,
- * Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs, and cry'd :
- * And such a piece of service will you do,
- * If you oppose yourselves to match lord Warwick.
- * Clif. Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump,
- * As crooked in thy manners as thy shape!
- * York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly anon.
- * Clif. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves.
- * K. Hen. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow? —
- * Old Salisbury, — shame to thy silver hair,
- * Thou mad misleader of thy brainsick son! —
- * What, wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian,
- * And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles?
- * O, where is faith? O, where is loyalty?
- * If it be banish'd from the frosty head,
- * Where shall it find a harbour in the earth? —
- * Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war,
- * And shame thine honourable age with blood?
- * Why art thou old, and want'st experience?
- * Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it?
- * For shame! in duty bend thy knee to me,
- * That bows unto the grave with mickle age.
- * Sal. My lord, I have consider'd with myself
- * The title of this most renowned Duke;
- * And in my conscience do repute his Grace
- * The rightful heir to England's royal seat.
- * K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?
- * Sal. I have.

* K. Hen. Canst thou dispense with Heaven for

* Sal. Is it great sin, to swear unto a sin?

* But greater sin, to keep a sinful oath.

* Who can be bound by any solemn vow?

* To do a murderous deed, to rob a man,

* To force a spotless virgin's chastity,

* To revoke the orphan of his patrimony,

* To wring the widow from her custom'd right;

* And have no other reason for this wrong;

* But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

* Q. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

* K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself.

* York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast,

* I am resolv'd for death, or dignity.

* Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true.

* War. You were best to go to bed, and dream again,

* To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

* Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm, Than any thou canst conjure up to-day;

* And that I write upon thy burgonet,

* Might I but know thee by thy household badge.

* War. Now by my father's badge, old Nevil's crest,

* The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged staff,

* This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet,

* (As on a mountain top the cedar shows,

* That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm),

* Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

* Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy bear, And tread it under foot with all contempt,

* Despight the bearward that protects the bear.

Rich. Fie! charity, for shame! speak not in spite,

Y. Olif. Foul stigmatick, that's more than thou canst tell.

* Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hall, [Exeunt severally.]

Saint Albans.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls!

And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,
Now, — when the angry trumpet sounds alarm,
And dead men's cries do fill the empty air, —
Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me!
Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter York.

‘How now, my noble lord? what, all a-foot?’

York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed;

' But match to match I have encounter'd him,

And made a prey for carrion kites and crows

Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well,

Enter CLIFFORD.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.

York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other
chace,

For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crown thou fight'st. —

*As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.*

[Exit WARWICK.]

Clif. What seest thou in me, York? why dost thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love,

But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem,

But that 'tis shown ignobly, and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy sword.

As I in justice and true right express it!

Clif. My soul and body on the action both! —

York. A dreadful lay! — address thee instantly. [They fight, and Clifford falls.]

Clif. La fin couronne les oeuvres. [Dies.]

York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.

Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will!
[Exit.]

Enter young Clifford.

* Y. Clif. Shame and confusion! all is on the rout;

* Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds

* Where it should guard. O war, thou son of hell,

* Whom angry heavens do make their minister,

- * Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part
- * Hot coals of vengeance! — Let no soldier fly:
- * He, that is truly dedicate to war,
- * Hath no self love; nor he, that loves himself,
- * Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,
- * The name of valour. — O, let the vile world end, [seeing his dead father.]
- * And the premised flames of the last day
- * Knit earth and heaven together!
- * Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
- * Particularities and petty sounds
- * To cease! — Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
- * To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve
- * The silver Mvery of advised age;
- * And, in thy reverence, and thy chair-days, thus
- * To die in ruffian battle? — Even at this sight,
- * My heart is turn'd to stone: and, while 'tis
mine,
- * It shall be stony. York not our old men spares;
- * No more will I their babes: tears virginal
- * Shall be to me even as the dew to fire;
- * And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclains,
- * Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax.
- * Henceforth, I will not have to do with pity:
- * Meet I an infant of the house of York,
- * Into as many gobbets will I cut it,
- * As wild Medea Young Absyrtus did:
- * In cruelty will I seek out my fame.
- * Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house;
[Taking up the body.]
- * As did Aeneas old Anchises bear,
- * So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders;
- * But then Aeneas bare a living load,
- * Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine. (Exit.)

Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET, and SOMERSET fighting, and SOMERSET is killed.

Rich. So, lie thou there; —

* For, underneath an alshouse, pally sign,
The Castle in saint Alban's Somerset,
Hath made the wizard famous in his death. —

* Sword, hold thy temper; heart, be wrathful
still:

* Priests pray for enemies, but Princes kill.
[Exit.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, and others, retreating.

* Q. Mar. Away, my Lord, you are slow; for shame, away!

* K. Hen. Can we outrun the heavens? good Margaret, stay.

* Q. Mar. What are you made of? you'll not fight, nor fly:

* Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence,

* To give the enemy way; and to secure us,

* By what we can, which can no more but fly,
[Alarum afar off.

* If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom

* Of all our fortunes: but if we haply scape,

* (As well we may, if not through your neglect.)

* We shall to London get; where you are lov'd;

* And where this breach, now in our fortunes made,

* May readily be stopp'd.

Enter young CLIFFORD.

- * Y. Clif. But that my heart's on future mischief set,
* I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly;
* But fly you must; uncurable discomfit
* Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts;
* Away, for your relief! and we will live
* To see their day, and them our fortune give!
* Away, my Lord, away! [Exeunt]

SCENE III.

Fields near Saint Albans.

Alarm. Retreat. Flourish; then enter YORK, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with drums and colours.

- * York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him;
* That winter lion, who, in rage, forgets
* Aged contusions and all brush of time;
* And, like a gallant in the brow of youth,
* Repairs him occasion? this happy day
* Is not itself; nor have we won one foot,
* If Salisbury be lost.
* Rich. My noble father,
* Three times to-day I help him to his horse;
* Three times bestrid him, thrice I led him off,
* Persuaded him from any further act:
* But still, where danger was, still there I met
him;
* And like rich hangings in a homely house,
* So was his will in his old feeble body.
* But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

126 SECOND PART OF K. HENRY VI.

Enter SALISBURY.

- ‘ Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to-day;
‘ By the mass, so did we all. — I thank you,
Richard:
‘ God knows, how long it is I have to live;
‘ And it hath pleas’d him, that three times today
‘ You have defended me from imminent death.
* Well, Lords, we have not got that which we have;
* ’Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
* Being opposites of such repairing nature.
‘ York. I know, our safety is to follow them;
‘ For, as I hear, the King is fled to London,
‘ To call a present court of parliament.
, Let us pursue him, ere the writs go forth: —
‘ What says Lord Warwick? shall we after them?
War. After them! nay, before them, if we can.
Now by my faith, Lords, ’twas a glorious day:
Saint Alban’s battle, won by famous York,
Shall be eterniz’d in all age to come. — Sound, drums and trumpets; — and to London
all:
And more such days as these do us befall!

THIRD PART OF
KING HENRY VI.

ACT I. SCENE I.

London. The Parliament-House.

*Drums. Some Soldiers of York's party break in.
Then, Enter the Duke of YORK, EDWARD,
RICHARD, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Others, with white roses in their hats.*

War. I wonder, how the King escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursu'd the horsemen of the north,

He slyly stole away, and left his men :

Whereat the great lord of Northumberland,

Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat,

' Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself,

' Lord Clifford, and lord Stafford, all a-breast,

' Charg'd our main battle's front, and, breaking in,

' Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, Duke of Buckingham,

' Is either slain, or wounded dangerous;

I cleft his beaver with a downright blow;

' That this is true, father, behold his blood.

[Showing his bloody sword.]

Mont. And, brother, here's the Earl of shire's blood. [To York, showing

Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd.

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them

I did. [Throwing down the
of Somerset's head

* York. Richard had best deserv'd of sons. —

What, is your Grace dead, my lord of Sor
Norf. Such hope have all the line of J

Gaunt!

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King
 head.

War. And so do I. — Victorious Pr
York,

Before I see thee seated in that throne

Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,

I vow by heaven, these eyes shall never c

This is the palace of the fearful King,

And this the regal seat: possess it, York

For this is thine, and not King Henry's h

York. Assist me then, sweet Warwick,
 will;

For higher we have broken in by force.

Norf. We'll all assist you; he, the shall die.

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk, — me, my Lords;

And, soldiers, stay, and lodge by night.

War. And, when the King comes, of no violence,

Unless he seek to thrust you out by force
 They

* York. The Queen, this day, here h parliament;

* But little thinks, we shall be of her council :

* By words, or blows, here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house.

War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd,

Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be King;
And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice
Hath made us by-words to our enemies.

* York. Then leave me not, my Lords; be resolute;

I mean to take possession of my right.

War. Neither the King, nor he that loves him best,

The proudest he that holds up Lancaster,
Dares stir a wing, if Warwick shake his bells.

I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares :—
Resolve thee, Richard; claim the English crown.

[Warwick leads York to the throne, who seats himself.]

Flourish. Enter King HENRY; CLIFFORD; NORTHUMBERLAND, WESTMORELAND, EXETER,
and Others, with red roses in their hats.

K. Hen. My Lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits,

Even in the chair of state! belike, he means,
(Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false Peer,)

To aspire unto the crown, and reign as King. —
Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father; —
And thine, Lord Clifford; and you both have vow'd revenge

On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends.

North. If I be not, heavens, be reveng'd

Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.

West. What, shall we suffer this? let's pluck him down:

My heart for anger burns, I cannot brook it.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle Earl of Westmoreland.

Clif. Patience is for poltroons, and such as he:
He durst not sit there, had your father liv'd.
My gracious Lord, here in the parliament,
Let us assail the family of York.

North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin; be it so.

K. Hen. Ah, know you not, the city favours
them,

And they have troops of soldiers at their beck?

Exe. But, when the Duke is slain, they'll quickly fly.

K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart,

To make a shambles of the parliament house!

Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats,

Shall be the war that Henry means to use. —

[They advance to the Duke.]

Thou factious Duke of York, descend my throne,
And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet;

I am thy Sovereign.

York. Thou art deceiv'd, I am thine.

Exe. For shame, come down; he made thee
Duke of York.

York. 'Twas my inheritance, as the earldom was.

Exe. Thy father was a traitor to the crown.

War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown,

In following this usurping Henry.

Clif. Whom should he follow, but his natural King?

War. True, Clifford; and that's Richard, Duke of York.

K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne?

York. It must and shall be so. Content thyself.

War. Be Duke of Lancaster, let him be King.

West. He is both King and Duke of Lancaster; And that the lord of Westmoreland shall maintain.

War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget,
That we are those, which chas'd you from the field,

And slew your fathers, and with colours spread
March'd through the city to the palace gates.

North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief;
And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it.

West. Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons,
Thy kinsmen, and thy friends, I'll have more lives,
Than drops of blood were in my father's veins.

Clif. Urge it no more; lest that, instead of words,
I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger,
As shall revenge his death, before I stir.

War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threats!

York. Will you, we show our title to the crown?

' If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.

K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown?

Thy father was, as thou art, Duke of York;

Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, Earl of March:

I am the son of Henry the fifth,
Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop,
And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces.

War. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.

K. Hen. The lord Protector lost it, and not I;
When I was crown'd, I was but nine months old.

Rich. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks, you base:—

Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head.

Edw. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head.

Mont. Good brother, [to York.] as thou lov'st and honour'st arms,

Let's fight it out, and not stand scuffling thus.

Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the King will fly.

York. Sons, peace!

K. Hen. Peace thou! and give King Henry leave to speak.

War. Plantagenet shall speak first:—hear him, Lords;

And be you silent and attentive too,

For he, that interrupts him, shall not live.

K. Hen. Think'st thou, that I will leave my kingly throne,

Wherein my grandsire, and my father, sat?

No: first shall war unpeople this my realm;

Ay, and their colours—often borne in France:

And now in England, to our hearts' great sorrow,—

Shall be my winding-sheet. — Why faint you,
Lords?

My title's good, and better far than his.

War. But prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be
King.

K. Hen. Henry the fourth by conquest got the crown.

York. 'Twas by rebellion against his King.

K. Hen. I know not what to say; my title's weak.

Tell me, may not a King adopt an heir?

York. What then?

K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful
King:

' For Richard, in the view of many lords,
Resign'd the crown to Henry the fourth;

Whose heir my father was, and I am his,

York. He rose against him, being his Sovereign,

And made him to resign his crown perforce.

War. Suppose, my Lords, he did it uncon-strain'd,

Think you, 'twere prejudicial to his crown?

Exe. No; for he could not so resign his crown,
But that the next heir should succeed and reign.

K. Hen. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter?

Exe. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.

* York. Why whisper you, my Lords, and answer not?

Exe. My conscience tells me, he is lawful
King.

King. All will revolt from me, and turn to
him.

North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st,
Think not, that Henry shall be so depos'd.

THIRD PART OF

Depos'd he shall be, in despite of all.
 Thou art deceiv'd: 'tis not thy southern Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent, that makes thee thus presumptuous and proud, —

set the Duke up, in despite of me.
 Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong, and Clifford vows to fight in thy defence;
 say that ground gape, and swallow me alive;
 Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father! how thy words revive
 my heart!

K. Hen. O Clifford, resign thy crown: —
 York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown: —
 What matter you, or what conspire you, Lords?
 War, Do right unto this princely Duke of

Or I will fill the house with armed men,
 And, o'er the chair of state, where now he sits,
 Write up his title with usurping blood.
 [He stamps, and the soldiers show themselves.]

K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, hear but one word; —
 Let me, for this my life-time, reign as King;
 York. Confirm the crown to me, and to mine heirs,

And thou shalt reign quiet while thou liv'st,
 K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,
 Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.

Clif. What wrong is this unto the Prince your son?
 War. What good is this to England, a himself?
 West. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!

Clif. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us?

West. I cannot stay to hear these articles.

North. Nor I.

Clif. Come, cousin, let us tell the Queen these news.

* West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate King,

* In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.

North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,

* And die in bands for this humanly deed!

Clif. In dreadful war may'st thou be overcome!
Or live in peace, abandon'd, and despis'd!

[Exeunt NORTHUMBERLAND, CLIFFORD, and WESTMORELAND.

* War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them
not.

Exe. They seek revenge, and therefore will not yield.

K. Hen. Ah, Exeter!

War. Why should you sigh, my Lord?

K. Hen. Not for myself, Lord Warwick, but my son,

Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit.

But, be it as it may: — I here entail

* The crown to thee, and to thine heirs for ever;

Conditionally, that here thou take an oath

To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,

To honour me as thy King and Sovereign;

* And neither by treason, nor hostility,

* To seek to put me down, and reign thyself.

York. This oath I willingly take, and will perform. [Coming from the throne.

War. Long live King Henry! — Plantagenet embrace him.

K. Hen. And long live thou, and these thy forward sons!

York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.

Exc. Accurs'd be he, that seeks to make them foes!

[Senet. The lords come forward.

York. Farewell, my gracious Lord; I'll to my castle.

War. And I'll keep London with my soldiers.

Norf. And I to Norfolk, with my followers.

Mont. And I unto the sea, from whence I came.

[Exeunt YORK, and his sons, WARWICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, Soldiers, and Attendants.

* K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court.

Enter Queen MARGARET and the Prince of Wales.

Exc. Here comes the Queen, whose looks bewray her anger.

I'll steal away.

K. Hen. Exeter, so will I.

Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me; I will follow thee.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle Queen, and I will stay.

* Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes?

* Ah, wretched man! 'would I had died a maid,

* And never seen thee, never borne thee son,

* Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father!

* Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus?

* Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I;

* Or felt that pain which I did for him once;

- * Or nourish'd him, as I did with my blood;
- * Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood there,
- * Rather than made that savage Duke thine heir,
- * And disinherited thine only son.
- * Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me:
- * If you be King, why should not I succeed?
- * K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret; — pardon me, sweet son;
- * The Earl of Warwick, and the Duke, enforc'd me.

* Q. Mar. Enforc'd thee! art thou King, and wilt be forc'd?

I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous wretch!

Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me;

, And given unto the house of York such head;

* As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.

* To entail him and his heirs unto the crown,

* What is it, but to make thy sepulchre,

* And creep into it far before thy time?

* Warwick is Chancellor, and the lord of Calais;

Stern Faulconbridge commands the narrow seas;

The Duke is made Protector of the realm;

* And yet shalt thou be safe? * such safety finds

* The trembling lamb, environed with wolves.

* Had I been there, which am a silly woman,

* The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes,

* Before I would have granted to that act.

* But thou preferrest thy life before thine honour:

* And, seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself,

* Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,

* Until that act of parliament be repeal'd,

* Whereby my son is disinherited.

The northern lords, that have forsworn thy colours,

THIRD PART OF

Will follow mine, if once they see them spread
 ' And spread they shall be; to thy foul disgrace
 ' And utter ruin of the house of York.
 ' Thus do I leave thee: — Come, son, I away;

 ' Our army's ready; come, we'll after them.

K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already get thee gone.

K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay
 with me?

Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies Prince. When I return with victory from the field,

I'll see your Grace: till then, I'll follow her.

Q. Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger
 thus.

[Exeunt Queen MARGARET, and the Prince]

K. Hen. Poor Queen! how love to me, and to her son,

' Hath made her break out into terms of rage!
 ' Reveng'd may she be on that hateful Duke;
 * Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
 * Will cost my crown; and, like an empty eagle,
 * Tire on the flesh of me, and of my son!
 * The loss of those three lords torments my heart,

* I'll write unto them, and entreat them fair; —
 * Come, cousin, you shall be the messenger.

* Exc. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them
 all.

[Exeunt]

SCENE II.

A Room in Sandal Castle, near Wakefield, in Yorkshire.

Enter EDWARD, RICHARD, and MONTAGUE.

Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.

Edw. No, I can better play the orator.

Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter YORK.

York. Why, how now, sons, and brother, at a strife?

What is your quarrel? how began it first?

Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.

York. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your Grace, and us;

The crown of England, father, which is yours.

York. Mine, boy?, not till King Henry be dead.

Rich. Your right depends not on his life, or death.

Edw. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now:

By giving the house of Lancaster leave to breathe,

It will outrun you, father, in the end.

York. I took an oath, that he should quietly reign.

Edw. But, for a kingdom, any oath may be broken:

I'd break a thousand oaths, to reign one year.

THE THIRD PART OF THE HISTORY OF KING RICHARD III.

- Rich.* No; God forbid, your Grace should be forsworn.
- York.* I shall be, if I claim by open war.
- Rich.* I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak.
- York.* Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.
- Rich.* An oath, as of no moment, being not sworn.
- Before a true and lawful magistrate,
That hath authority over him that swears:
Henry had none, but did usurp the place;
Then, seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,
Your oath, my Lord, is vain and frivolous.
Therefore, to arms. * And father, do but think,
How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown
Within whose circuit is Elysium,
And all that poets feign of bliss and joy.
Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest,
Until the white rose, that I wear, be dy'd
Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.
- York.* Richard, enough; I will be King or die.
- Brother, thou shalt see London presently,
And whet on Warwick to this enterprise.
Thou, Richard, shalt unto the Duke of Norfolk,
And tell him privily of our intent.
You, Edward, shall unto my lord Cobham,
With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise:
In them I trust; for they are soldiers,
Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit,
While you are thus employ'd, what resteth more,
But that I seek occasion how to rise:
And yet the King not privy to my drift,
Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

Enter

KING HENRY VI.

145

Enter a Messenger.

' But, stay; What news? Why com'st thou in such post?

' Mes. The Queen, with all the northern Earls and Lords,

' Attend here to besiege you in your castle;
' She is hard by with twenty thousand men;

' And therefore fortify your hold, my Lord.
' York. Ay, with my sword. What! think'st thou, that we fear them? —

' Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me; —
' My brother Montague shall post to London;

' Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,
' Whom we have left Protectors of the King,

' With powerful policy strengthen themselves;
' And trust not simple Henry, nor his oaths.

' Mont. Brother, I go; I'll win them, fear it not:

' And thus most humbly I do take my leave.

[Exit.]

Enter Sir John and Sir Hugh MORTIMER.

York. Sir John, and Sir Hugh Mortimer; mine uncles!

' You are come to Sandal in a happy hour;
The army of the Queen mean to besiege us.

Sir John. She shall not need, we'll meet her in the field.

' York. What, with five thousand men?

Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need.

' woman's general; What should we fear?

[A march afar off.]

' Edw. I hear their drums; Let's set our men
in order;

VOL. XI,

And issue forth, and bid them battle straight.
York. Five men to twenty! — though the odds be great,
 I doubt not, uncle, of our victory.
 Many a battle have I won in France,
 When as the enemy hath been ten to one;
 Why should I not now have the like success?

[Alarums. Extolling.]

SCENE III.

Plains near Sandal Castle.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter RUTLAND, and his Tutor.

Rut. Ah, whither shall I fly, to 'scape their hands!

Ah, tutor! look, where bloody Clifford comes!

Enter Clifford, and Soldiers.

Clif. Chaplain, away! thy priesthood saves thy life.

As for the brat of this accursed Duke,
 Whose father slew my father, — he shall die.

Tut. And I, my Lord, will bear him company,

Clif. Soldiers, away with him.

Tut. Ah, Clifford! murder not this innocent child,

Lest thou be hated both of God and man.

[Exit, forced off by Soldiers.]

Clif. How now! is he dead already? Or, is it fear,

That makes him close his eyes? — I'll open them.

KING HENRY VI.

147

Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch.

' That trembles under his devouring paws;
And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey;

' And so he comes, to rend his limbs asunder. —

' Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword,
And not with such a cruel threatening look.

Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die; —

I am too mean a subject for thy wrath,

Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live.

Clif. In vain thou speak'st, poor boy; my father's blood

Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should enter.

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it again;
He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.

Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives, and thine,

Were not revenge sufficient for me:

No, if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves,

And hung their rotten coffins up in chains,

It could not slake mine ire, nor ease my heart.

The sight of any of the house of York

Is as a fury to torment my soul;

' And till I root out their accursed line,

' And leave not one alive, I live in hell.

Therefore — [Lifting his hand.]

Rut. O, let me pray before I take my death: —

To thee I pray; sweet Clifford, pity me!

Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords.

' Rut. I never did thee harm; Why wilt thou slay me?

Clif. Thy father hath.

Rut. But 'twas ere I was born.

Thou hast one son, for his sake pity me;

Lest, in revenge thereof, — since God is just, —

He be as miserably slain as I have been;
 Ah, let me live in prison all my days;
 And when I give occasion of offence,
 Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.

Clif. No cause?

Thy father slew my father; therefore die.

[CLIFFORD stabs him

Rut. Dii faciunt, laedis summa sit ista theat

[Die

Clif. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet!

And this thy son's blood, cleaving to my blade,
 Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood,
 Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off bot

[Exi

SCENE IV.

The same.

Alarum. Enter York.

York. The army of the Queen hath got the field;

My uncles both are slain in rescuing me;
 And all my followers to the eager foe
 Turn back, and fly, like ships before the win
 Or lambs pursu'd by hunger-starv'd wolves.
 My sons — God knows, what hath bechanc'd
 them:

But this I know, — they have demean'd their selves

Like men born to renown, by life, or death;
 Three times did Richard make a lance to me;
 And thrice cry'd, — *Courage, father! fight
 it out!*

And full as oft came Edward to my side,

Enter Queen MARGARET, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, and Soldiers.

'A bird that will revenge upon you all:
'And, in that hope, I throw mine eyes to heaven,

Scorning whate'er you can afflict me with!
 ' Why come you not? what! multitudes fear?

Clif. So cowards fight, when they can further?

' So doves do peck the faulcon's piercing talons;
 ' So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their Breathe out invectives 'gainst the officers.

York. O, Clifford, but bethink thee once ' And in thy thought o'er-run my former
 * And, if thou canst for blushing, view this And bite thy tongue, that slanders him cowardice,

' Whose frown hath made thee faint and fl

Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for But buckle with thee blows, twice two for

[Drum]
Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford! for a tho
 causes,

I would prolong a while the traitor's life: -
 Wrath makes him deaf: speak thou, North berland.

North. Hold, Clifford; do not honou
 so much,

To prick thy finger, though to wound his
 What valour were it, when a cur doth grin
 For one to thrust his hand between his teeth
 When he might spurn him with his foot aw
 It is war's prize to take all vantages;
 ' And ten to one is no impeach of valour.

[They lay hands on York, who struggles]

Clif. Ay, ay, so strives the woodcock the gun.

North. So doth the coney struggle in [York is taken]

York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty ;

So true men yield , with robbers so o'er-match'd.

North. What would your Grace have done unto him now ?

Q. Mar. Brave warriors , Clifford and Northhumberland,

Come make him stand upon this molehill here ;

' That raught at mountains with out-stretched
arms,

Yet parted but the shadow with his hand. —

* What! was it you, that would be England's King ?

Was't you that revell'd in our parliament,

And made a preachment of your high descent ?

Where are your mess of sons, to back you now ?

The wanton Edward, and the lusty George ?

' And where's that valiant crook-back prodigy,

Dicky your boy, that, with his grumbling voice,

Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies ?

Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland ?

Look, York ; I stain'd this napkin with the blood

' That valiant Clifford, with his rapiers' point,

Made issue from the bosom of the boy :

And, if thine eyes can water for his death,

I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.

' Alas, poor York ! but that I hate thee deadly,

I should lament thy miserable state.

I pr'ythee, grieve, to make me merry, York ;

Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance,

What, hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine
entrails,

That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death ?

* Why art thou patient, man? thou shouldst be mad ;

* And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus.

Thou wouldst be fe'd; I see, to make me sport;
 York cannot speak, unless he wear a crown. —
 A crown for York; — and, Lords, bow low to
 him.

Hold you his hands; whilst I do set it on. — [Putting a paper crown on his head.]

Ay, marry, Sir, now looks he like a King!

Ay, this is he that took King Henry's chair;

And this is he was his adopted heir.

But how is it, that great Plantagenet

Is crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath?

As I bethink me, you should not be King,

Till our King Henry had shook hands with death,

And will you pale your head in Henry's glory,

And rob his temples of the diadem?

Now in his life, against your holy oath?

O, 'tis a fault too too unpardonable!

Off with the crown; and, with the crown, his

head;

And, whilst we breathe, take time to do him
 dead.

Clif. That is my office; for my father's sake.

Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let's hear the reasons he makes.

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France,

Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's tooth!

How ill-beseeming is it to thy sex,

To triumph, like an Amazonian trull,

Upon their woes, whom fortune captivates?

But that thy face is, visor-like, unchanging,

Made impudent with use of evil deeds,

I would assay, proud Queen, to make thee blush:

To tell thee whence thou com'st, of whom deriv'd,

Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless.

Thy father bears the type of King of Naples,
Of both the Sicils, and Jerusalem;
Yet not so wealthy as an English Freeman.

Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?
It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud Queen;
Unless the adage must be verify'd, —

That beggars, mounted, run their horse to death.

'Tis beauty, that doth oft make women proud;

But, God he knows, thy share thereof is small:

'Tis virtue, that doth make them most admir'd;

The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at:

'Tis government, that makes them seem divine,

The want thereof makes thee abominable;

Thou art as opposite to every good,

As the Antipodes are unto us,

Or as the south to the septentrion.

O, tiger's heart, wrapp'd in a woman's hide!

How could'st thou drain the life-blood of the child,

To bid the father wipe his eyes withal,

And yet be seen to bear a woman's face?

Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible;

'Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless.

'Bid'st thou me rage? why, now thou hast thy wish:

'Would'st have me weep? why, now thou hast thy will:

'For raging wind blows up incessant shower,

And, when the rage allays, the rain begins.

These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies;

'And every drop cries vengeance for his death, —

'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, — and thee, false Frenchwoman.

North. Beshrew me, but his passions move me so,

That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.

York. That face of his the hungry cannibals
Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood;

But you are more inhuman, more inexorable, —
O, ten times more, — than tygers of Hyrcania.
See, ruthless Queen, a hapless father's tears;
This cloth thou dipp'dst in blood of my sweet
boy,

And I with tears do wash the blood away.

Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this:

[He gives back the handkerchief.]

And, if thou tell'st the heavy story right,
Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears;
Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,
And say, — Alas, it was a piteous deed! —
There, take the crown, and, with the crown,
my curse;

And, in thy need, such comfort come to thee,
As now I reap at thy too cruel hand! —

Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world;
My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!

North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin,

'I should not for my life but weep with him,
To see how inly sorrow gripes his soul.

Q. Mar. What, weeping-ripe, my Lord Northhumberland?

Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.

Clif. Here's for my oath, here's for my father's death. [stabbing him.]

Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted King. [stabbing him.]

York. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious God!
 ' My soul flies through these wounds to seek out thee. [Dies.

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates;
 So York may overlook the town of York.
 [Exeunt.

ACT II. SCENE I.

A Plain near Mortimer's cross in Herefordshire.

Drums. Enter EDWARD, and RICHARD, with their forces, marching.

* Edw. I wonder, how our princely father
 'scap'd;
 * Or whether he be 'scap'd away, or no,
 * From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit;
 * Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the
 news;
 * Had he been slain, we should have heard the
 news;
 * Or, had he 'scap'd, methinks, we should have heard
 * The happy tidings of his good escape. —
 † How fares my brother? why is he so sad?
Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd Where our right valiant father is become.
 ' I saw him in the battle range about;
 ' And watch'd him, how he singled Clifford forth.
 ' Methought, he bore him in the thickest troop,
 As doth a lion in a herd of neat:
 * Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs;
 Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry,

- * The rest stand all aloof, and hark at him;
 - * So far'd our father with his enemies;
 - * So fled his enemies my warlike father;
 - * Methinks, 'tis prize enough to be his son.
- See, how the morning opens her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun!
- * How well resembles it the prime of youth;
 - * Trimm'd like a younker, prancing to his love?

Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns?

Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun;

Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.
See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,
As if they vow'd some league inviolable:
Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun.
In this the heaven figures some event.

* Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.

I think, it cites us, brother, to the field;
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our deeds,
Should, notwithstanding, join our lights together,
And over-shine the earth, as this the world.
Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear
Upon my target three fair shining suns.

* Rich. Nay, bear three daughters; — by ybut leave I speak it,

* You love the breeder better than the males.

Enter a Messenger.

* But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretel
Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue?

Mes. Ah, one that was a woful looker on,

When the noble Duke of York was slain,

* Your princely father, and my loving lord.

* Edw. O, speak no more! for I have heard too much.

* Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear it all.

* Mes. Environed he was with many foes;

* And stood against them as the hope of Troy

* Against the Greeks, that would have enter'd Troy.

* But Hercules himself must yield to odds;

* And many strokes, though with a little axe,

* Hew down and fell the hardest-timber'd oak.

* By many hands your father was subdu'd;

* But only slaughter'd by the ireful arm

* Of unrelenting Clifford, and the Queen:

* Who crown'd the gracious Duke, in high de-spight;

* Laugh'd in his face; and, when with grief he wept,

* The ruthless Queen gave him, to dry his cheeks,

* A napkin steeped in the harmless blood.

* Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford slain:

* And, after many scorns, many foul taunts,

* They took his head, and on the gates of York

* They set the same; and there it doth remain,

* The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.

Edw. Sweet Duke of York, our prop to lean upon;

* Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay! —

* O Clifford, boist'rous Clifford, thou hast slain

* The flower of Europe for his chivalry;

* And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him,

* For, hand to hand, he would have vanquish'd thee! —

Now, my soul's palace is become a prison:

* Ah, would she break from hence! that this my body

* Might in the ground be closed up in rest:

* For never henceforth shall I joy again,

* Never, O never, shall I see more joy.

* Rich. I cannot weep; for all my body's moisture

Scarcely serves to quench my Turnace-burning heart:

* Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great burden;

* For self-same wind, that I should speak withal,

* Is kindling coals, that fire all my breast,

* And burn me up with flames, that tears would quench.

* To weep, is to make less the depth of grief:

* Tears, then, for babes; blows, and revenge, for me! —

* Richard, I bear thy name, I'll venge thy death,

* Or die renowned by attempting it.

Edw. His name that valiant Duke hath left with thee;

His dukedom and his chair with me is left.

Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird,

Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun:

For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom say;

Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter WARWICK and MONTAGUE, with forces.

War. How now, fair Lords? What fare?
what news abroad?

Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we should recount

Our baleful news, and, at each word's deliverance,

Stab poniards in our flesh, till all were told,
The words would add more anguish than the wounds.

O valiant Lord, the Duke of York is slain.

Edw. O Warwick! Warwick! that Plantagenet,
Which held thee dearly, as his soul's redemption,
Is by the stern lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears;

And now, to add more measure to your woes,
I come to tell you things since then befall'n.

After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp,
Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run,
Were brought me of your loss, and his depart.

I then in London, keeper of the King,
Must'rd my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends,
And very well appointed, as I thought,

March'd towards saint Alban's to intercept the Queen,

Bearing the King in my behalf along:

For by my scouts I was advertised,
That she was coming with a full intent

To dash our late decree in parliament,

' Touching King Henry's oath, and your succession.

Short tale to make, — we at saint Alban's met,

Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought,
 But, whether 'twas the coldness of the King,
 Who look'd full gently on his warlike Queen,
 That robb'd my soldiers of their hated spleen
 Or whether 'twas report of her success;
 Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour
 ' Who thunders to his captives — blood and death,
 I cannot judge: but, to conclude with truth,
 Their weapons like to lightning came and we
 Our soldiers' — like the night-owl's lazy sin
 ' Or like a lazy thresher with a flail, —
 Fell gently down, as if they struck their friend.
 I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
 With promise of high pay, and great rewards
 But all in vain; they had no heart to fight,
 And we, in them, no hope to win the day,
 So that we fled; the King, unto the Queen;
 Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself
 In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you
 For in the marches here, we heard, you were,
 Making another head to fight again.

Edw. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, George
 Warwick?

And when came George from Burgundy to England?

War. Some six miles off the Duke is with the soldiers:

And for your brother, — he was lately sent
 From your kind aunt, Duchess of Burgundy,
 ' With aid of soldiers to this needful war.

Rich. 'Twas odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled:

Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit,
 But ne'er, till now, his scandal of retire.

War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear:

For thou shalt know, this strong right hand of mine

Can pluck the diadem from saint Henry's head,
And wring the awful scepter from his fist;

Were he as famous and as bold in war,

As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well, Lord Warwick: blame me not;

'Tis love, I bear thy glories, makes me speak.

But, in this troublous time, what's to be done?

Shall we go throw away our coats of steel,

And wrap our bodies in black mourning gowns,

Numb'ring our Ave-Maries with our beads?

Or shall we on the helmets of our foes

Tell our devotion with revengeful arms?

If for the last, say — Ay, and to it, Lords.

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out;

And therefore comes my brother Montague.

Attend me, Lords. The proud insulting Queen,

With Clifford, and the haught Northumberland,

And, of their feather, many more proud birds,

Have wrought the easy-melting King, like wax.

He swore consent to your succession,

His oath enrolld in the parliament;

And now to London all the crew are gone,

To frustrate both his oath, and what beside

May make against the house of Lancaster.

' Their power, I thing, is thirty thousand strong;

Now, if the help of Norfolk, and myself,

With all the friends that thou, brave Earl of

March,

Amongst the loving Welchmen canst procure,

' Will but amount to five and twenty thousand;

Why, Fie! to London will we march again;

And once again bestride our foaming steeds,

' And once again cry — Charge upon our
But never once again turn back, and fly.

Rich. Ay, now methinks, I hear great W.
speak:

Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day,
' That cries — Retire, if Warwick bid him

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder lean;

' And when thou fail'st, (as God forbids hour!)

Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forbids

War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke
York;

' The next degree is, England's royal throne
For King of England shalt thou be proclaimed
In every borough as we pass along;

And he, that throws not up his cap for joy,

' Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head
King Edward, — valiant Richard, — Montague
Stay we no longer dreaming of renown,

' But sound the trumpets, and about our tents

* Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as as steel,

* (As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,

* I come to pierce it, — or to give thee more

* Edw. Then strike up, drums; — God bless saint George, for us

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now? What news?

Mes. The Duke of Norfolk sends you
by me,

*The Queen is coming with a puissant host;
And craves your company for speedy counsel*

War. Why then it sorts, brave warriors
Let's away. [Exeunt.]

S C E N E II.

Before York.

Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, the Prince of Wales, CLIFFORD, and NORTHUMBERLAND, with forces.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my Lord, to this brave town of York.

Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy,
That sought to be encompass'd with your crown;
'Doth not the object cheer your heart, my Lord?

K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wreck; —

To see this sight, it irks my very soul. —
Withhold revenge, dear God! 'tis not my fault,
Nor wittingly have I infring'd my vow.

Olif. My gracious Liege, this too much lenity
And harmful pity, must be laid aside.

To whom do lions cast their gentle looks?
Not to the beast that would usurp their den.
Whose hand is that, the forest bear doth lick?
Not his, that spoils her young before her face.
Who 'scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting?
Not he, that sets his foot upon her back.

The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on;
'And doves will peck, in safeguard of their brood.

Ambitious York did level at thy crown,
Thou smiling, while he knit his angry brows:
He, but a Duke, would have his son a King.

And raise his issue, like a loving sire;
 Thou, being a King, bless'd with a goodly se
 Didst yield consent to disinherit him,
 ' Which argued thee a most unloving father.
 Unreasonable creatures feed their young:
 And though man's face be fearful to their eyes
 Yet, in protection of their tender ones,
 Who hath not seen them (even with those wings
 ' Which sometime they have us'd with fearful flight,)

Make war with him that climb'd unto their ne
 Offering their own lives in their young's defense
 For shame, my Liege, make them your preceder
 Were it not pity, that this goodly boy
 Should lose his birthright by his father's fault
 And long hereafter say unto his child, —
What my great-grandfather and grandsi got,

My careless father fondly gave away?
 Ah, what a shame were this! Look on the boy
 And let his manly face, which promiseth
 Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart,
 To hold thine own, and leave thine own wi
 him.

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd th orator,
 Inferring arguments of mighty force.
 ' But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear,
 That things ill-got had ever had success?
 And happy always was it for that son,
 Whose father for his hoarding went to hell?
 I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind;
 And 'would, my father had left me no more!
For all the rest is held at such a rate,
' As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep
' Than in possession any jot of pleasure.

Ah, cousin York! 'would thy best friends did know,

' How it doth grieve me that thy head is here!

' Q. Mar. My Lord, cheer up thy spirits; our foes are nigh,

' And this soft courage makes your followers faint.

' You promis'd knighthood to our forward son;

' Unsheathe your sword, and dub him presently. —
Edward, kneel down.

K. Hen. Edward Plantagenet, arise a knight;
And learn this lesson, — Draw thy swort in right.

Prince. My gracious father, by your kingly
leave,

I'll draw it as apparent to the crown,

And in that quarrel use it to the death.

Clif. Why, that is spoken like a toward Prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Royal commanders, be in readiness:

' For, with a band of thirty thousand men,
Comes Warwick, backing of the Duke of York;

And, in the towns as they do march along,

Proclaims him King, and many fly to him:

' Darraign your battle, for they are at hand.

Clif. I would, your Highness would depart the field;

The Queen hath best success when you are absent.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave us to our fortune.

K. Hen. Why, that's my fortune too; therefore I'll stay.

North. Be it with resolution then to fight.

Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble lords,
And hearten those that fight in your defence;

Unsheathe your sword, good father, cry, Saint George!

March. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, WARWICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now, perjur'd Henry! wilt thou kneel for 'grace,

And set thy diadem upon my head;

* Or bide the mortal fortune of the field?

Q. Mar. Go rate thy minious, proud insulting boy!

* Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms,

* Before thy Sovereign, and thy lawful King?

Edw. I am his King, and he shall bow his knee;

I was adopted heir by his consent:

Since when, his oath is broke; for, as I hear,

You — that are King, though he do wear the
crown, —

Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament,

* To blot out me, and put his own son in.

Clif. And reason too;

Who should succeed the father, but the son?

Rich. Are you there, butcher? — O, I cannot speak?

Clif. Ay, crook-back; here I stand, to answer
thee,

* Or any be the proudest of thy sort.

Rich. 'Twas you that kill'd young Rutland, was it not?

Clif. Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfy'd.

Rich. For God's sake, Lords, give signal to the fight.

War. What say'st thou, Henry, wilt thou yield
the crown?

Q. Mar. Why, how now, long-tongu'd Warwick? dare you speak?

When you and I met a saint Alban's last,
Your legs did better service than your hands.

War. Then 'twas my turn to fly, and now 'tis thine.

Clif. You said so much before, and yet you fled.

War. 'Twas not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.

North. No, nor your manhood, that durst make you stay.

Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reverently; —

Break off the parley; for scarce I can refrain

The execution of my big-swoln heart

Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer.

Clif. I slew thy father: Call'st thou him a child?

Rich. Ay, like a dastard, and a treacherous coward,

As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland;

But, ere sun-set, I'll make thee curse the deed.

K. Hen. Have done with words, my Lords; and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Defy them then, or else hold close thy lips.

K. Hen. I pr'ythee, give no limits to my tongue;

I am a King, and privileg'd to speak.

Clif. My Liege, the wound, that bred this meeting here,

Cannot be cur'd by words; therefore be still.

Rich. Then, executioner, unsheath thy sword:

By him that made us all, I am resolv'd,

That Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue.

Edw. Say, Henry, shall I have my right,
or no? •

A thousand men have broke their fasts to-day,
That ne'er shall dine, unless thou yield the
crown.

War. If thou deny, their blood upon thy
head;

For York in justice puts his armour on.

Prince. If that be right, which Warwick says is right,

There is no wrong, but every thing is right.

Rich. Whoever got thee, there thy mother stands;

For, well I wot, thou hast thy mother's tongue.

Q. Mar. But thou art neither like thy sire nor dam;

But like a foul mishapen stigmatick,
Mark'd by the destinies to be avoided,

As venom toads, or lizards' dreadful stings.

Rich. Iron of Naples, hid with English gilt,
Whose father bears the title of a King.

(As if a channel should be call'd the sea.)

Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art
extraught,

To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart?

Edw. A wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns,

To make this shameless callet know herself. •

* Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou,

* Although thy husband may be Menelaus;

* And ne'er was Agamemnon's brother wrong'd

* By that false woman, as this King by thee.

His father revell'd in the heart of France,

And tam'd the King, and made the Dauphin
stoop;

And, had he match'd according to his state,

169

He might have kept that glory to this day;
But, when he took a beggar to his bed,
And grac'd thy poor sire with his bridal day;
' Even then that sunshine brew'd a shower for
him.

' That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of France,
And heap'd sedition on his crown at home.

' For what hath broach'd this tumult, but thy pride ?

Hadst thou been meek, our title still had slept;
And we, in pity of the gentle King,
Had slipp'd our claim until another age.

‘ Geo. But, when we saw our sunshine made thy spring,

' And that thy summer bred us no increase,
We set the axe to thy usurping root:

And though the edge hath something hit ourselves,

‘ Yet, know thou, since we have begun to strike,

' We'll never leave, till we have hewn thee down,
Or bath'd thy growing with our heated bloods.

Edw. And, in this resolution, I defy thee;
Not willing any longer conference,
Since thou deny'st the gentle King to speak. — Sound trumpets! — let our bloody colours wave! —

And either victory, or else a grave.

Q. Mar. Stay, Edward.

Edw. No, wrangling woman; we'll no longer stay :

These words will cost ten thousand lives to-day.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

A field of battle between Towton and Saxton in Yorkshire.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a race,
I lay me down a little while to breathe;
For strokes receiv'd, and many blows repaid,
Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their
strength,
And, spite of spite, needs must I rest a while.

Enter EDWARD, running.

Edw. Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, un-gentle death!
' For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is clouded.
War. How now, my Lord? what hap? what hope of good?

Enter GEORGE.

* Geo. Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair;
' Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us:
' What counsel give you? whither shall we fly?
' Edw. Bootless is flight, they follow us with wings;
' And weak we are, and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter RICHARD.

Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?

' Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,
' Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance;
' And, in the very pangs of death, cry'd, —
' Like to a dismal clangour heard from far, —
' Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death!

' So underneath the belly of their steeds,
' That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood,
' The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.
' War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood:

I'll kill my horse, because I will not fly.

* Why stand we like soft-hearted women here;
* Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage;
* And look upon, as if the tragedy
* Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors?
' Here on my knee I vow to God above,
' I'll never pause again, never stand still,
' Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,
' Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edw. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine:

' And, in this vow, do chain my soul to thine.—

* And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold
face,

* I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to
thee,

Thou setter up and plucker down of Kings!

' Beseeching thee, — if with thy will it stands,

' That to my foes this body must be prey, —

' Yet ~~that thy~~ brazen gates of heaven may ope,

' And give sweet passage to my sinful soul! —

' Now, Lords, take leave until we meet again,
Where-e'er it be, in heaven, or on earth.

' Rich. Brother, give me thy hand, — as gentle Warwick,

' Let me embrace thee in my weary arms: —
' I, that did never weep, now melt with woe,
' That winter should cut off our spring-time

' Wat. Away, away! Once more, sweet Lord
farewell,

' Geo. Yet let us all together to our troop
' And give them leave to fly that will not stay;
And call them pillars, that will stand to us;
' And, if we thrive, promising them such reward
' As victors wear at the Olympian games;
* This may plant courage in their quailing breasts
* For yet is hope of life, and victory. —
Fore-slow no longer, make we hence again.

[Exeunt]

SCENE IV.

The same. Another part of the field.

Excursions. Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD

' Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone:

' Suppose, this arm is for the Duke of York,
' And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge
' Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall.

Clif. Now, Richard, I am with thee here
alone:

This is the hand, that stabb'd thy father York;
And this the hand, that slew thy brother Rutland;
And here's the heart, that triumphs in their death

And cheers these hands, that slew thy sire and brother,
To execute the like upon thyself;
And so, have at thee.

[They fight. Warwick enters; Clifford flies.

' Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other
chace;

' For I myself will hunt this wolf to death.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.

Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter King Henry.

* K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morn-ing's war,

* When dying clouds contend with growing light;

* What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,

* Can neither call it perfect day, nor night.

* Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea,

* Forc'd by the tide to combat with the wind;

* Now aways it that way, like the self-same sea

* Forc'd to retire by fury of the wind:

* Sometime the flood prevails; and then, the wind;

* Now, one the better: then, another best;

* Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,

* Yet neither conqueror, nor conquered;

* So is the equal poise of this fell war.

* Here on this molehill will I sit me down.

* To whom God will, there be the victory!

* For Margaret my Queen; and Clifford too,

* Have obid me from the battle; swearing both,

* They prosper best of all when I am thence.

'Would I were dead! if God's good will were

so :

' For what is in this world, but grief and woe ?

* O God! methinks, it were a happy life,

' To be no better than a homely swain;

* To sit upon a hill, as I do now,

* To carve out dials quaintly, point by point,

* Thereby to see the minutes how they run:

* How many make the hour full complete,

* How many hours bring about the day,

* How many days will finish up the year,

* How many years a mortal man may live.

* When this is known, then to divide the times:

* So many hours must I tend my flock;

* So many hours must I take my rest;

* So many hours must I contemplate;

* So many hours must I sport myself;

* So many days my ewes have been with young;

* So many weeks ere the poor fools will year;

* So many years ere I shall sheer the fleece:

* So many minutes, hours, days, weeks, months,
and years,

* Pass'd over to the end they were created,

* Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave,

* Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!

* Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade

* To shepherds, looking on their silly sheep,

* Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy

* To Kings, that fear their subjects' treachery?

* O, yes, it doth; a thousand fold it doth.

* And to conclude, — the shepherd's homely
curds,

* His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,

* His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,

* All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,

- * Is far beyond a Prince's delicacies,
- * His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
- * His body couched in a curious bed,
- * When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him.

Alarum. Enter a Son that has killed his Father, dragging in the dead body.

Son. Till blows the wind, that profits nobody. —

' This man, whom hand to hand I slew in fight,
' May be possessed with some store of crowns :

* And I, that haply take them from him now,

* May yet ere night yield both my life and them

* To some man else, as this dead man doth me. —

' Who's this ? — O God ! it is my father's face,

' Whom in this conflict I unawares have kill'd.

' O heavy times, begetting such events !

' From London by the King was I press'd forth ;

' My father, being the Earl of Warwick's man,

' Came on the part of York, press'd by his master ;

' And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,

' Have by my hands of life bereav'd him. —

' Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did ! —

And pardon, father, for I knew not thee ! —

* My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks,

* And no more words, till they have flow'd their fill.

' K. Hen. O piteous spectacle ! O bloody times !

Whilst lions war, and battle for their dens,

' Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity. —

* Weep, wretched man, I'll aid thee tear for tear ;

* And let our hearts, and eyes, like civil war,

* As Priam was for all his valiant sons,

I'll bear thee hence; and let them fight that will,
For I have murder'd where I should not kill.

Prince of Wales, and EXETER.*

 O, Lancaster! I fear thy overthrow,
 More than my body's parting with my soul.
 My love, and fear, glew'd many friends to ' And, now I fall, thy tough commixtures
 Impairing Henry, strength'ning mis-proud
 The common people swarm like summer

And whither fly the gnats, but to the sun?
 And who shines now, but Henry's enemies?
 O Phoebus! hadst thou never given consent
 That Phacton should check thy fiery steeds,
 Thy burning car never had scorch'd the earth:
 And, Henry, had'st thou sway'd as Kings should do,
 Or as thy father, and his father, did,
 Giving no ground unto the house of York,
 ' They never then had sprung like summer flies;
 ' I, and ten thousand in this luckless realm,
 Had left no mourning widows for our death,
 And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace.
 For what doth cherish weeds, but gentle air?
 ' And what makes robbers bold, but too much lenity?

Bootless are plaints, and cureless are my wounds;
 ' No way to fly, nor strength to hold out fight;
 The foe is merciless, and will not pity;
 For, at their hands, I have deserv'd no pity.
 ' The air hath got into my deadly wounds,
 And much effuse of blood doth make me faint:—
 Come, York, and Richard, Warwick and the rest;
 ' I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast.

 RICHARD, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Sol-

 ' But think you, Lords, that Clifford fled with them?

War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape:
 For, though before his face I speak the words,
 Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave.
 ' And, wheresoe'er he is, he's surely dead.

[CLIFFORD groans, and dies.
Edw. Whose soul is that which takes her heart leave?

Rich. A deadly groan like life and death's parting.

Edw. See who it is: and, now the battle ended,

If friend, or foe, let him be gently us'd.

 sound,

[Attendants bring the body forward.]

War. I think his understanding is bereft: — Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to
thee? —

Dark cloudy death o'ershades his beams of life,
And he nor sees, nor hears us what we say.

Rich. O, 'would he did! and so, perhaps,
he doth;

' 'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,

' Because he would avoid such bitter taunts

' Which in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager
words.

Rich. Clifford, ask mercy, and obtain no
grace.

Edw. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence.

War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.

Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.

' Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.

Edw. Thou pitied'st Rutland, I will pity thee.

Geo. Where's captain Margaret, to fence you now?

War. They mock thee, Clifford! swear as thou wast wont.

' Rich. What, not an oath? nay, then the world goes hard,

' When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath:—
I know by that, he's dead; And, by my soul,

' If this right hand would buy two hours' life,
That I in all despite might rail at him,

' This hand should chop it off; and with the issuing blood

Stifle the villain, whose unstaunched thirst

York and young Rutland could not satisfy.

War. Ay, but he's dead: Off with the traitor's head,

And rear it in the place your father's stands —
And now to London with triumphant march,
There to be crowned England's royal King.

' From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France,

And ask the lady Bona for thy Queen:

So shalt thou sinew both these lands together;

' And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread

The scatter'd foe, that hopes to rise again;

For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,

Yet look to have them buz, to offend thine ears.

First, will I see the coronation;

' And then to Britany I'll cross the sea,

To effect this marriage, so it please my Lord.

Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be:

* For on thy shoulder do I build my seat;

* And never will I undertake the thing,

* Wherein thy council and consent is wanting. —

' Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloster; —

' And George, of Clarence; — Warwick, as ourself,

' Shall do, and undo, as him pleaseth best.

Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence; George, of Gloster;

For Gloster's dukedom is too ominous.

War. Tut, that's a foolish observation;

Richard, be Duke of Gloster: Now to London,

To see these honours in possession. [Exeunt.]

ACT III. SCENE I.

A Chace in the North of England.

Enter two Keeper's, with cross-bows in their hands.

* 1. Keep. Under this thick-grown brake we'll shroud ourselves:

* For through this laund anon the deer will
come;

* And in this covert will we make our stand,

* Culling the principal of all the deer.

* 2. Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot.

* 1. Keep. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow

* Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.

* Here stand we both, and aim we at the best:

* And, for the time shall not seem tedious,

* I'll tell the what befell me on a day,

* In this self-place where now we mean to stand.

* 2. Keep. Here comes a man, let's stay till he be past.

Enter King HENRY, disguised, with a prayer-book.

* K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love,

* To greet mine own land with my wishful sight.

* No Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine;

* Thy place is fill'd, thy scepter wrung from thee,

anointed:

2. Keep. Say, what art thou, that talk'st of Kings and Queens?

* K. Hen. More than I seem, and less I was born to:

* A man at least, for less I should not be;

And men may talk of Kings, and why not I?

* 2. Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a King.

* K. Hen. Why, so I am, in mind; and that's enough.

2. Keep. But, if thou be a King, where is thy crown?

K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my head;

* Not deck'd with diamonds, and Indian stones,

* Nor to be seen: ' My crown is call'd content;

* A crown it is, that seldom Kings enjoy.

* 2. Keep. Well, if you be a King crown'd with content,

* 2. Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.

* K. Hen. I was anointed King at nine months old;

For we were subjects, but while you were King

in the King's,
To go with us unto the officers.

K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your King's name be obey'd:

* And what God will, that let your King perform;

* And what he will, I humbly yield unto.

SCENE II.

London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King EDWARD, GLOSTER, CLARENCE, and Lady GREY.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloster, at saint Alban's
field

* This lady's husband, Sir John Grey, was slain,

His lands then seiz'd on by the conqueror:

Her suit is now, to repossess those lands;

* Which we in justice cannot well deny,

Because in quarrel of the house of York

* The worthy gentleman did lose his life.

Glo. Your Highness shall do well, to grant her suit;

* It were dishonour, to deny it her.

K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll make a pause,

Glo. Yea! it is so?

[Aside to Clar.

I see, the Lady hath a thing to grant,

Before the King will grant her humble suit,

Clar. He knows the game; How true he keeps the wind? [Aside]

Glo. Silence! [Aside]

* K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit;

* And come some other time, to know our mind

* L. Grey. Right gracious Lord, I cannot brook delay:

* May it please your Highness to resolve me now

* And what your pleasure is, shall satisfy me.

* Glo. [Aside.] Ay, widow? then I'll warrant you all your lands,

* An if what pleases him, shall pleasure you.

* Fight, closer, or, good faith, you'll catch blow.

* Clar. I fear her not, unless she chance fall. [Aside]

* Glo. God forbid that! for he'll take advantage
[Aside]

* K. Edw. How many children hast thou widow? tell me.

Clar. I think, he means to beg a child of his [Aside]

Glo. Nay, whip me then; he'll rather give his
two. [Aside]

L. Grey. Three, my most gracious Lord.

Glo. You shall have four, if you'll be ruled by him. [Aside]

* K. Edw. 'Twere pity, they should lose the father's land.

L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread Lord, and grant it then.

K. Edw. Lords, give us leave; I'll try the widow's wit.

Glo. Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave,

' Till youth take leave, and leave you to the crutch.

[Gloster and Clarence retire to the other side.]

* K. Edw. Now tell me, Madam, do you love your children?

* L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.

K. Edw. And would you not do much to do them good?

* L. Grey. To do them good, I would sustain some harm.

* K. Edw. Then yet your husband's lands, to do them good.

* L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your Majesty.

K. Edw. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.

* L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your Highness' service.

* K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me, if I give them?

* L. Grey. What you command, that rests in me to do.

* K. Edw. But you will take exceptions to my boon.

* L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.

* K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask.

* L. Grey. Why, then I will do what your Grace commands.

* Glo. He plies her hard; and much rain wears the marble. [Aside.]

* Clar. As red as fire! nay, then her wax must melt. [Aside.]

- L. Grey.* Why stops my Lord? shall I not hear my task?
- K. Edw.* An easy task; 'tis but to love a King.
- L. Grey.* That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.
- K. Edw.* Why then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee.
- L. Grey.* I take my leave, with many thousand thanks.
- Glo.* The match is made; she seals it with a curt'sy.
- K. Edw.* But stay thee, 'tis the fruits of love
I mean.
- * L. Grey. The fruits of love, I mean, my loving Liege.
- * K. Edw. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense.
What love, think'st thou, I sue so much to get?
- * L. Grey. My love till death, my humble thanks, my prayers;
- * That love, which virtue begs, and virtue grants.
- K. Edw.* No, by my troth, I did not mean such love.
- * L. Grey. Why, then you mean not as I thought you did.
- * K. Edw. But now you partly may perceive my mind.
- * L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive
- * Your Highness aims at, if I aim aright.
- K. Edw.* To tell thee plain, I aim to lie with thee.
- * L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather lie in prison.
- K. Edw.* Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.
- L. Grey.* Why, then mine honesty shall be my dower;

For by that loss I will not purchase them.'

' K. Edw. Therein thou wroug'st thy children mightily.

L. Grey. Herein your Highness wrongs both them and me.

But, mighty Lord, this merry inclination

' Accords not with the sadness of my suit;

Please you dismiss me, either with ay, or no

K. Edw. Ay; if thou wilt say ay, to my request:

No; if thou dost say no, to my demand.

L. Grey. Then, no, my Lord. My suit is at and end.

' Glo. The widow likes him not, she knits her brows. [Aside.]

Clar. He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom. [Aside.]

' K. Edw. [Aside.] Her looks do argue her replete with modesty;

* Her words do show her wit incomparable;

* All her perfections challenge sovereignty:

One way, or other, she is for a King;

And she shall be my love, or else my Queen.—

Say, that King Edward take thee for his Queen?

L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious Lord:

I am a subject fit to jest withal,

But far unfit to be a Sovereign.

K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee,

I speak no more than what my soul intends;

And that is, to enjoy thee for my love.

L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto;

' I know, I am too mean to be your Queen;
And yet too good to be your concubine.

K. Edw. You cavil, widow; I did mean, my Queen.

L. Grey. 'Twill grieve your Grace, my sons should call you — father.

K. Edw. No more; than when my daughters call thee mother.

Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children;
And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,
Have other some: why, 'tis a happy thing
To be the father unto many sons.

' Answer no more, for thou shalt be my Queen.

Glo. The ghostly father now hath done his shrift. [Aside.

Clar. When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shift. [Aside.

K. Edw. Brothers, you must see what that we two have had.

' Glo. The widow likes it not, for she looks sad.

K. Edw. You'd think it strange if I should marry her.

Clar. To whom, my Lord?

K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.

Glo. That would be ten days' wonder, at the least.

Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

' Glo. By so much is the wonder in extremes.

K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers: I can tell you both,

Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

Nob. My gracious Lord, Henry your foe is taken,

' And brought your prisoner to your palace gate.

K. Edw.

K. Edw. See, that he be convey'd unto the Tower: —

' And go we, brothers, to the man that took him,

' To question of his apprehension. —

' Widow, go you along; — Lords, use her honourable.

[Exeunt King EDWARD, Lady GREY, CLARENCE, and Lords.]

Glo. Ay, Edward will use woman honourably.

' Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all;

' That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring,

' To cross me from the golden time I look for!

' And yet, between my soul's desire, and me,

* (The lustful Edward's title buried,) . . .

' Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward;

' And all the unlook'd-for issue of their bodies,

' To take their rooms, ere I can place myself:

A cold premeditation for my purpose!

* Why, then I do but dream on Sovereignty;

* Like one that stands upon a promontory,

* And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,

* Wishing his foot were equal with his eye;

* And chides the sea that sunders him from thence,

* Saying — he'll lade it dry to have his way:

* So do I wish the crown, being so far off;

* And so I chide the means that keep me from it;

* And so I say — I'll cut the causes off,

* Flattering me with impossibilities. —

* My eye's too quick, my heart o'erweans too much,

* Unless my hand and strength could equal them.

- * Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard;
- * What other pleasure can the world afford?
- * I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,
- * And deck my body in gay ornaments,
- And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks.
- * O miserable thought! and more unlikely,
- * Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns!
- Why, love forswore me in my mother's womb!
- * And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,
- * She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe
- * To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub;
- * To make an envious mountain on my back,
- Where sits deformity to mock my body;
- * To shape my legs of an unequal size;
- * To disproportion me in every part,
- * Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp,
- * That carries no impression like the dam.
- And am I then a man to be belov'd?
- * O, monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought!
- * Then, since this earth affords no joy to me,
- * But to command, to check, to o'erbear such
- * As are of better person than myself,
- * I'll make my heaven — to dream upon the crown;
- * And, whiles I live, to account this world but hell,
- * Until my misshap'd trunk that bears this head,
- * Be round impaled with a glorious crown.
- * And yet I know not how to get the crown,
- * For many lives stand between me and home:
- * And I, — like one lost in a thorny wood,

Lewis doth sit.

* Q. Mar. No, mighty King of France; now
Margaret

Must strike her sail, and learn a while to serve.
* Where Kings command. I was, I must confess,

* Great Albion's Queen in former golden day's;
* But now mischance hath trod my title down,

* And with dishonour laid me on the ground;
* Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,

* And to my humble seat conform myself.
* K. Lew. Why, say, fair Queen, whence springs this deep despair?

* Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears,

* And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.

* K. Lew. Whate'er it be, be thou still like thyself,

* And sit thee by our side: yield not thy neck
[Seats her by him.]

* To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
* Still ride in triumph over all mischance.

* Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief
* It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.

* Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive in drooping thoughts,

* And give my tongue—ty'd sorrows leave
speak.

* Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis
* That Henry, sole possessor of my love,

* Is, of a King, become a banish'd man,
* And forc'd to live in Scotland a forlorn;

* While proud ambitious Edward, Duke of York
* Usurps the regal title, and the seat

* Of England's true-anointed lawful King.

- * This is the cause, that I, poor Margaret, —
- * With this my son, Prince Edward, Henry's heir,
- * Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid;
- * And, if thou fail us, all our hope is done:
- * Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help;
- * Our people and our Peers are both misled,
- * Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight,
- * And, as thou see'st, ourselves in heavy plight.
- * K. Lew. Renowned Queen, with patience calm the storm,
- * While we bethink a means to break it off.
- * Q. Mar. The more we stay, the stronger grows our foe.
- * K. Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll succour thee.
- * Q. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow:
- * And see, where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter WARWICK, attended.

- * K. Lew. What's he, approacheth boldly to our presence?
- * Q. Mar. Our Earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend.
- * K. Lew. Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?
- [Descending from his state. Queen
 MARGARET rises.]
- * Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise;
- * For this is he, that moves both wind and tide.
- * War. From worthy Edward, King of Albion,
My Lord and Sovereign, and thy vowed friend,

I come, — in kindness, and unfeigned love,
 First, to do greetings to thy royal person;
 And, then, to crave a league of amity;
 And, lastly, to confirm that amity
 With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant
 That virtuous Lady Bona, thy fair sister,
 To England's King in lawful marriage.

Q. Mar. If that go forward, Henry's hope is done.

War. And, gracious madam; [to BONA.] in our King's behalf,

' I am command, with your leave and favour,
 Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue
 To tell the passion of my Sovereign's heart;
 Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears,
 Hath plac'd thy beauty's image, and thy virtue.

Q. Mar. King Lewis, — and Lady Bona, — hear me speak,

' Before you answer Warwick. His demand
 * Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest
 love,

* But from deceit, bred by necessity;

* For how can tyrants safely govern home,

* Unless abroad they purchase great alliance?

* To prove him tyrant, this reason may suffice,—

* That Henry liveth still: but were he dead,

* Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henry's son.

* Look therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage

* Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour:

* For though usurpers sway the rule awhile,

* Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.

War. Injurious Margaret!

Prince. And why not Queen?

War. Because thy father Henry did usurp;
And thou no more art Prince, than she is Queen.

Oxf. Then Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt,

Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;
And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the fourth,
' Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest;
And, after that wise Prince, Henry the fifth,
Who by his prowess conquered all Franco:
From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how haps it, in this smooth discourse,

You told not, how Henry the sixth hath lost
All that which Henry the fifth had gotten?
Methinks, these Peers of France should smile at that.

But for the rest, — You tell a pedigree
Of threescore and two years; a silly time
To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

' Oxf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy Liege,
' Whom thou obeyed'st thirty and six years,
And not bewray thy treason with a blush?

War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,

Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree?
For shame, leave Henry, and call Edward King.

' Oxf. Call him my King, by whose injurious doom

' My elder brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere, Was done to death? and more than so, my father,

Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years,
' When nature brought him to the door of death?

No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this arm,

This arm upholds the house of Lanca
War. And I the house of York.

You have a father able to maintain you;
And better 'twere, you troubled him than France.

Warwick, peace;

* For both of you are birds of self-same feather.

[A horn sounded within.]

K. Lew. Warwick, this is some post to 'us, or thee,

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Lord Ambassador, these letters are for you;

- Sent from your brother, Marquis Montague. —

These from our King unto your Majesty. —

And, Madam, these for you; from whom I know not.

[To Margaret, They all read their letters.]

Oxf. I like it well, that our fair Queen and mistress

Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.

Prince. Nay, mark, how Lewis stamps as he were nettled;

* I hope, all's for the best,

' K. Lew. Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair Queen?

' Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with unhop'd joys.

War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent.

' K. Lew. What! has your King marry'd the Lady Grey?

' And now, to sooth your forgery and his,

' Sends me a paper to persuade me patience?

' Is this the alliance that he seeks with France?

' Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?

' Q. Mar. I told your Majesty as much before:
This proveth Edward's love, and Warwick's honesty.

War. King Lewis, I here protest, in sight of heaven,

And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss, —
That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's;
No more my King, for he dishonours me;
But moost himself, if he could see his shame, —
Did I forget, that by the house of York
My father came untimely to his death?
Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece?
Did I impale him with the regal crown?
Did I put Henry from his native right;
And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame?
* Shame on himself! for my desert is honour;
* And, to repair my honour lost for him,
* I here renounce him, and return to Henry;
* My noble Queen, let former grudges pass,
And henceforth I am thy true servitor;
I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona,
And replant Henry in his former state.

* Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love;

* And I forgive and quite forget old faults,
* And joy that thou becom'st King Henry's friend.

War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend,

That, if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us
With some few bands of chosen soldiers,
I'll undertake to land them on our coast,
And force the tyrant from his seat by war,
'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him;

* And as for Clarence, — as my letters tell me,

* He's very likely now to fall from him;

* For matching more for wanton lust than honour,

* Or than for strength and safety of our country.

* Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be reveng'd,

* But by thy help to this distressed Queen?

* Q. Mar. Renowned Prince, how shall poor Henry live,

* Unless thou rescue him from foul despair?

* Bona. My quarrel, and this English Queen's, are one,

* War. And mine, fair Lady Bona, joins with yours.

* K. Lew. And mine, with hers, and thine, and Margaret's Therefore, at last, I firmly am resolv'd,

You shall have aid.

* Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.

K. Lew. Then England's messenger, return in post;

And tell false Edward, thy supposed King, —

That Lewis of France is sending over maskers,

To revel it with him and his new bride:

* Thou seest what's past, go fear thy King withal.

Bona. Tell him, In hope he'll prove a widower, shortly,

I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.

Q. Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are laid aside,

And I am ready to put armour on.

War. Tell him from me, That he hath done me wrong;

And therefore I'll uncrown him, ere't be long.

There's thy reward; be gone. [Exit Mes.]

K. Lew. But, Warwick, thou,

And Oxford, with five thousand men,

Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle:

* And, as occasion serves, this noble Queen

- * And Prince shall follow with a fresh supply.
- * Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt: —
- * What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?

War. This shall assure my constant loyalty; —
That if our Queen and this young Prince agree,
I'll join mine eldest daughter, and my joy,
To him forthwith in holy wedlock hands.

* Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion: —

- * Son Edward; she is fair and virtuous,
- * Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick;
- * And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,
- * That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

* Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it;

- * And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand.
[He gives his hand to Warwick.]

K. Lew. Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levy'd,

- * And thou, Lord Bourbon, our high Admiral,
- * Shall waft them over with our royal fleet. —
- * I long, till Edward fall by war's mischance,
- * For mocking marriage with a dame of France.
[Exeunt all but Warwick.]

War. I came from Edward as ambassador,
But I return his sworn and mortal foe:
Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,
But dreadful war shall answer his demand.
Had he none else to make a stale, but me?
Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.
I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown,
And I'll be chief to bring him down again:
Not that I pity Henry's misery,
But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. (Exit.

ACT IV. SCENE I.

London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter GLOSTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET, MONTAGUE, and Others.

* Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you

* Of this new marriage with the Lady Grey?

* Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?

* Clar. Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to France;

* How could he stay till Warwick made return?

* Som. My Lords, forbear this talk; here comes the King.

Flourish. Enter King Edward, attended; Lady Grey, as Queen; PEMBROKE, STAFFORD, HASTINGS, and Others.

* Glo. And his well-chosen bride.

* Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think.

* K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you our choice,

* That you stand pensive, as half malcontent?

* Clar. As well as Lewis of France, or the Earl of Warwick;

* Which are so weak of courage, and in judgment,

* That they'll take no offence at our abuse.

* K. Edw. Suppose, they take offence without a cause,

' They are but Lewis and Warwick; I am Edward,

' Your King and Warwick's, and must have my
will.

' Glo. And shall have your will, because our King:

' Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too?

' Glo. Not I:

' No; God forbid, that I should wish them sever'd

' Whom God hath join'd together: ay, and
'twere pity,

To sunder them that yoke so well together.

' K. Edw. Setting your scorns, and your mis-like, aside,

' Tell me some reason, why the Lady Grey

' Should not become my wife, and England's Queen: —

' And you too, Somerset, and Montague;

' Speak freely what you think.

' Clar. Then this is my opinion, — that King
Lewis

' Becomes your enemy, for mocking him

' About the marriage of the Lady Bona.

' Glo. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,

' Is now dishonoured by this new marriage.

' K. Edw. What, if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd,

' By such invention as I can devise?

Mont. Yet to have join'd with France in such alliance,

Would more have strengthen'd this our commonwealth

'Gainst foreign storms, than any home-bred marriage.

' Hast. Why, knows not Montague, that of itself

' England is safe, if true within itself?

* Mout. Yes; but the safer, when 'tis back'd with France.

* Hast. 'Tis better using France, than trusting France:

Let us be back'd with God, and with the seas,

* Which he hath given for fence impregnable,

* And with their helps only defend ourselves;

* In them, and in ourselves, our safety lies.

Clar. For this one speech, Lord Hastings well deserves

' To have the heir of the Lord Hungerford.

' K. Edw. Ay, what of that? it was my will, and grant;

* And, for this once, my will shall stand for law.

' Glo. And yet, methinks, your Grace hath not done well,

' To give the heir and daughter of Lord Scales

' Unto the brother of your loving bride;

' She better would have fitted me, or Clarence:

' But in your bride you bury brotherhood.

' Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the heir

' Of the lord Bonville on your new wife's son,

' And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.

K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence! is it for a wife,

' That thou art malcontent? I will provide thee.

' Clar. In choosing for yourself, you show'd your judgement:

' Which being shallow, you shall give me leave

' To play the broker in mine own behalf;
' And to that end, I shortly mind to leave you.

' K. Edw. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be King;

' And not be ty'd unto his brother's will.

' Q. Eliz. My Lords, before it pleas'd his Majesty

' To raise my estate to title of a Queen,

' Do me but right, and you must all confess

' That I was not ignoble of descent,

* And meaner than myself have had like fortune:

* But as this title honours me and mine,

* So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,

* Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

' K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns:

' What danger, or what sorrow can befall thee,

' So long as Edward is thy constant friend,

' And their true Sovereign, whom they must obey?

' Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,

' Unless they seek for hatred at my hands:

' Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,

' And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

* Glo. I hear, yet say not much, but think the more. [Aside.]

Enter a Messenger.

' K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters, or what news,

From France?

' Mes. My sovereign Liege, no letters; and few words,

' But such as I, without your special pardon,
Dare not relate.

' K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee : therefor in brief,

' Tell me their words as near as thou canst give them.

' What answer makes King Lewis unto our letters?

Mes. At my depart, these were his very
words ;

*Go tell false Edward, thy supposed King, —
That Lewis of France is sending over masker
To revel it with him and his new bride.*

K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave ? belike, he thinks me Henry.

' But what said Lady Bona to my marriage ?

Mes. These were her words, utter'd with mild disdain ;

*Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly
I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.*

' K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say little less ;

' She had the wrong. But what said Henry
Queen ?

' For I have heard, that she was there in place.

Mes. Tell him, quoth she, my mourning weeds are done,

And I am ready to put armour on.

' K. Edw. Belike, she minds to play the Amazon.

But what said Warwick to these injuries ?

' Mes. He, more incens'd against your Majesty

' Than all the rest, discharg'd me with these
words ;

*Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong
And therefore I'll uncrown him, ere't be long*

KING HENRY VI.

211

K. Edw. Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words?

* Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd:
They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption.

* But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?
Mes. Ay, gracious Sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship,
That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's daughter.

Clar. Belike, the elder; Clarence will have the younger.

* Now, brother King, farewell, and sit you fast,
* For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;
* That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage

* I may not prove inferior to yourself. —
You, that love me and Warwick, follow me.
[Exit CLARENCE, and SOMERSET follows.

* Glo. Not I:
* My thoughts aim at a further matter; I
* Stay not for the love of Edward, but the crown.
[Aside.

K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!

* Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen;
* And haste is needful in this desperate case. —
Pembroke, and Stafford, you in our behalf
Go levy men, and make prepare for war;
They are already, or quickly will be landed:
Myself in person will straight follow you.

[Exeunt Pembroke and Stafford.
But, ere I go, Hastings, — and Montague, —
Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest,
Are near to Warwick, by blood, and by alliance:

THIRD PART OF

- ' Tell me, if you love Warwick more than me?
 ' If it be so, then both depart to him;
 ' I rather wish you foes, than hollow friends;
 ' But if you mind to hold your true obedience,
 ' Give me assurance with some friendly vow,
 ' That I may never have you in suspect.

Mon. So God help Montague, as he proves true!

Hast. And Hastings, as he favours Edward's cause!

' K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Glo. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you.

' K. Edw. Why so; then am I sure of victory.
 ' Now therefore let us hence; and lose no hour,
 ' Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A Plain in Warwickshire.

Enter WARWICK and OXFORD, with French and other forces.

War. Trust me, my Lord, all hitherto goes well;
 The common people by number swarm to us.

Enter CLARENCE and SOMERSET.

But, see, where Somerset and Clarence come;—
 Speak suddenly, my Lords, are we all friends?

Clar. Fear not that, my Lord.

War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto
Warwick;

And welcome, Somerset: — I hold it cowardice,
To rest mistrustful where a noble heart
Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love;
Else might I think, that Clarence, Edward's
brother,

Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings:
But welcome, Clarence; my daughter shall be thine.

And now what rests, but, in night's coverture,
Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd,
His soldiers lurking in the towns about,
And but attended by a simple guard,

We may surprize and take him at our pleasure?
Our scouts have found the adventure very easy:

* That as Ulysses, and stout Diomede,

* With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus'
tents,

* And brought from thence the Thracian fatal
steeds;

* So we, well cover'd with the night's black mantle,

* At unawares may beat down Edward's guard,

* And seize himself; I say not — slaughter him,

* For I intend but only to surprize him. —

* You, that will follow me to this attempt,

* Applaud the name of Henry, with your leader.

[They all cry, Henry!]

Why, then, let's on our way in silent sort:

For Warwick and his friends, God and saint George!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Edward's Camp, near Warwick.

Enter certain Watchmen, to guard the King's tent.

- * 1. Watch. Come on, my Masters, each man take his stand;
- * The King, by this, is set him down to sleep.
- * 2. Watch. What, will he not to-bed?
- * 1. Watch. Why, no: for he hath made a solemn vow
- * Never to lie and take his natural rest,
- * Till Warwick, or himself, be quite suppress'd.
- * 2. Watch. To-morrow, then, belike, shall be the day,
- * If Warwick be so near as men report.
- * 3. Watch. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that,
- * That with the King here resteth in his tent?
- * 1. Watch. 'Tis the Lord Hastings, the King's chiefest friend.
- * 3. Watch. O, is it so? But why commands
the King,
- * That his chief followers lodge in towns about
him,
- * While he himself keepeth in the cold field?
- * 2. Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because more dangerous.
- * 3. Watch. Ah, but give me worship, and quietness,
- * I like it better than a dangerous honour.
- * If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,
- * 'Tis to be doubted, he would waken him.

* 1. Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage.

* 2. Watch. Ay, wherefore else guard we his royal tent,

* But to defend his person from night-foes?

Enter WARWICK, CLARENCE, OXFORD, SOMERSET, and forces.

* War. This is his tent; and see, where stand his guard.

* Courage, my Masters: honour now, or never!

* But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

1. Watch. Who goes there?

* 2. Watch. Stay, or thou diest.

[Warwick, and the rest, cry all — Warwick! Warwick! and set upon the guard; who fly, crying — Arm! Arm! Warwick, and the rest, following them.]

The drum beating, and trumpets sounding, Re-enter WARWICK, and the rest, bringing the King out in a gown, sitting in a chair: GLOSTER and HASTINGS fly.

* Som. What are they that fly there?

* War. Richard, and Hastings: let them go, here's the Duke.

K. Edw. The Duke! why, Warwick, when,
we parted last,

Thou call'dst me King?

War. Ay, but the case is alter'd:

* When you disgrac'd me in my embassy,

* Then I degraded you from being King,

And come now to create you Duke of York:

Alas! how should you govern any kingdom,
 That know not how to use ambassadors;
 Nor how to be contented with one wife;
 Nor how to use your brothers brotherly;
 * Nor how to study for the people's welfare;
 Nor how to shrowd yourself from enemies?

* K. Edw. Yea, brother of Clarence, art thou here too?

* Nay, then I see, that Edward needs must down. —

' Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,

' Of thee thyself, and all thy complices,

' Edward will always bear himself as King:

* Though fortune's malice overthrow my state,

* My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

War. Then, for his mind, be Edward England's King:

[Takes off his crown.]

But Henry now shall wear the English crown,

* And be true King indeed: thou but the shadow. —

' My Lord of Somerset, at my request,

' See that forthwith Duke Edward be convey'd

' Unto my brother, Archbishop of York.

' When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellows,

' I'll follow you, and tell what answer

' Lewis, and the Lady Bona, send to him: —

Now, for a while, farewell, good Duke of York:

* K. Edw. What fates impose, that men must needs abide;

* It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

[Exit King Edward, led out; Somerset with him.]

* Oxf. What now remains, my Lords, for us
 to do;

* But march to London with our soldiers?

War. Ay, that's the first thing that we have to do;

* To free King Henry from imprisonment,
And see him seated in the regal throne.

[Exeunt.]

S C E N E IV.

London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen ELIZABETH and RIVERS.

* Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?

* Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn,

* What late misfortune is befall'n King Edward?

Riv. What, loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?

* Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person.

* Riv. Then is my Sovereign slain?

* Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner;

* Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard,

* Or by his foe surpriz'd at unawares:

* And; as I further have to understand,

* Is new committed to the Bishop of York;

* Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe.

* Riv. These news, I must confess, are full of grief:

* Yet, gracious Madam, bear it as you may;

* Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day.

* Q. Eliz. Till then, fair hope must hinder life's decay.

* And I the rather wean me from despair,
 * For love of Edward's offspring in my womb:
 * This is it that makes me bridle passion,
 * And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross;
 * Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear,
 * And stop the rising of blood sucking sighs,
 * Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown
 * King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English
 crown.

* Riv. But, Madam, where is Warwick then become?

* Q. Eliz. I am informed, that he comes towards London.

* To set the crown once more on Henry's head:
 * Guess thou the rest; King Edward's friends must down.

* But, to prevent the tyrant's violence,
 * (For trust not him that hath once broken faith,)
 * I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary
 * To save at least the heir of Edward's right;
 * There shall I rest secure from force, and fraud.
 * Come therefore, let us fly, while we may fly;
 * If Warwick take us, we are sure to die.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

A Park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter GLOSTER, HASTINGS, Sir William Stanley, and Others.

* Glo. Now, my Lord Hastings, and Sir William Stanley,
 * Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,

- ' Into this chiefest thicket of the park,
 ' Thus stands the case: You know, our King,
 my brother,
 ' Is prisoner to the Bishop here, at whose hands
 ' He hath good usage and great liberty;
 ' And often, but attended with weak guard,
 ' Comes hunting this way to desport himself.
 ' I have advertis'd him by secret means,
 ' That if, about this hour, he make this way,
 ' Under the colour of his usual game,
 ' He shall here find his friends with horse and men,
 ' To set him free from his captivity.

Enter King EDWARD, and a Huntsman.

- ' Hunt. This way, my Lord; for this way lies the game.
 ' K. Edw. Nay, this way, man; see, where the huntsmen stand. —
 ' Now, brother of Gloster, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
 ' Stand you thus close, to steal the Bishop's deer?
 ' Glo. Brother, the time and case requireth haste;
 ' Your horse stands ready at the park corner.
 ' K. Edw. But whither shall we then?
 ' Hast. To Lynn, my Lord; and ship from thence to Flanders.
 ' Glo. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning.
 ' K. Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forward-
 ness.
 ' Glo. But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to talk.

- * K. Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou?
 thou go along?
- * Hunt. Better do so, than tarry and hang'd.
- * Glo. Come then, away; let's have no ado.
- * K. Edw. Bishop, farewell: shield thee
 Warwick's frown;
 And pray that I may repossess the crown. [Exit

SCENE VI.

A Room in the Tower.

Enter King HENRY, CLARENCE, WARWICK, MERSET, young RICHMOND, OXFORD, MONTAGUE, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.

- * K. Hen. Master Lieutenant, now that and friends
 * Have shaken Edward from the regal seat;
 * And turn'd my captive state to liberty,
 * My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys;
 * At our enlargement what are thy due fees?
- * Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of Sovereigns;
- * But, if an humble prayer may prevail,
 * I then crave pardon of your Majesty.
- * K. Hen. For what, Lieutenant? for using me?
- * Nay, be thou sure, I'll well requite thy
 ness,

- * For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure:
- * Ay, such a pleasure is incaged birds
- * Conceive, when, after many moody thoughts,
- * At last, by notes of household harmony,
- * They quite forget their loss of liberty. —
- * But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free;
- * And chiefly therefore I thank God, and thee;
- * He was the author, thou the instrument.
- * Therefore, that I may conquer fortune's spite;
- * By living low, where fortune cannot hurt me;
- * And that the people of this blessed land
- * May not be punish'd with any thwarting stars;
- * Warwick, although my head still wear the
crown,
- * I here resign my government to thee,
- * For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.
- * War. Your Grace hath still been fam'd for virtuous;
- * And now may seem as wise as virtuous,
- * By spying, and avoiding, fortune's malice,
- * For few men rightly temper with the stars:
- * Yet in this one thing let me blame your Grace;
- * For choosing me, when Clarence is in place.
- * Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,
- * To whom the heavens, in thy nativity,
- * Adjudg'd an olive branch, and laurel crown,
- * As likely to be blest in peace, and war;
- * And therefore I yield thee my free consent.
- * War. And I choose Clarence only for Protector.
- * K. Hen. Warwick, and Clarence, give me both your hands;
- * Now join your hands, and, with your hands,
your hearts,
- * That no dissention hinder government:

THIRD PART OF

‘ I make you both Protectors of this land;
 ‘ While I myself will lead a private life,
 ‘ And in devotion spend my latter days,
 To sin’s rebuke, and my Creator’s praise.

War. What answers Clarence to his Sovereign’s will?

* Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent;

* For on thy fortune I repose myself.

* War. Why then, though loath, yet must I be content;

* We’ll yoke together, like a double shadow

* To Henry’s body, and supply his place;

* I mean, in bearing weight of government,

* While he enjoys the honour, and his ease.

* And, Clar. now then it is more than needful,

* Forthwith that Edward be pronounc’d a traitor,

* And all his lands and goods be confiscate.

Clar. What else? and that succession be determin’d.

* War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

* K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs,

* Let me entreat, (for I command no more,)

- * His hand to wield a scepter; and himself
- * Likely, in time, to bless a regal throne.
- Make much of him, my Lords; for this is he;
- * Must help you more than you are hurt by me.

Enter a Messenger.

* War. What news, my friend?

* Mes. That Edward is escaped from your brother,

* And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy.

* War. Unsavoury news: But how made he escape?

* Mes. He was convey'd by Richard Duke of Gloster,

* And the Lord Hastings, who attended him

* In secret ambush on the forest side,

* And from the Bishop's huntsmen rescued him;

* For hunting was his daily exercise.

* War. My brother was too careless of his charge. —

* But let us hence, my Sovereign, to provide

* A salve for any sore that may betide.

[A march begun.]

K. Edw. Nay, stay, Sir John, a while; and we'll debate,

By what safe means the crown may be recover'd.

Mont. What talk you of debating? in few words,

If you'll not here proclaim yourself our King,

I'll leave you to your fortune; and be gone,

To keep them back that come to succour you;

Why should we fight, if you pretend no title?

Glo. Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?

* K. Edw. When we grow stronger, then we'll make our claim:

Mont. Ay, now my Sovereign speaketh like himself;

And now will I be Edward's champion.

Hast. Sound, trumpet; Edward shall be here proclaim'd: —

By this I challenge him to single fight.

K. Edw. Thanks, brave Montgomery; — and thanks unto you all.
‘ If fortune serve me, I’ll requite this kindness.
‘ Now, for this night, let’s harbour here in York:
‘ And, when the morning sun shall raise his car
‘ Above the border of this horizon,
‘ We’ll forward towards Warwick, and his mates;
‘ For, well I not, that Henry is no soldier. —
* Ah, forward Clarence! — how evil it beseems
thee,
* To flatter Henry, and forsake thy brother!
* Yet, as we may, we’ll meet both thee and Warwick. —
* Come on, brave soldiers; doubt not of the day;
* And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay.

SCENE VIII.

London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY, WARWICK, CLARENCE, MONTAGUE, EXETER, and OXFORD.

War. What council, Lords? Edward from Belgia,
With hasty Germans, and blunt Hollanders,

pass'd in safety through the narrow seas, with his troops doth march again to London;

Many giddy people flock to him.

Exf. Let's levy men, and beat him back again.

r. A little fire is quickly trodden out;

As, being quench'd, rivers cannot quench.

W. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted
 friends,

Constant in peace, yet bold in war;

As will I muster up: — and thou, son Clarence,

Art stir, in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent,

Thou knights and gentlemen to come with
 thee:

Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham,
 Southampton, and in Liecestershire, shalt find
 As well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st, —

Thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well belov'd,
 Oxfordshire shalt muster up thy friends. —

Thou, sovereign, with the loving citizens, —

Thou, to his island, girt in with the ocean,

Thou, modest Dian, circled with her nymphs, —

Thou, rest in London, till we come to him. —

Lords, take leave, and stand not to reply. —

Well, my Sovereign.

Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope.

Mar. In sign of truth, I kiss your Highness' hand.

K. Hen. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate!

Mont. Comfort, my Lord; — and so I take my leave.

* Oxf. And thus [kissing Henry's hand.] I say my truth, and bid adieu

* K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Margaret,
farewell,

* And all at once, once more a happy farewell War. Farewell, sweet Lords; let's meet at Coventry.

[Exeunt WAR. CLAR. OXF. and MO.]

* K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest while.

* Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your Lordship

* Methinks, the power, that Edward hath
in the field,

* Should not be able to encounter mine.

* Exe. The doubt is, that he will seduce
you to rest.

* K. Hen. That's not my fear, my need hath got me fame.

* I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands

* Nor posted off their suits with slow delays;

* My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds

* My mildness hath allay'd their swelling griefs

* My mercy dry'd their water-flowing tears:

* I have not been desirous of their wealth,

* Nor much oppress'd them with great subsidies

* Nor forward of revenge, though they have urged;

* Then why should they love Edward more than me?

* No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace:

* And, when the lion fawns upon the lamb,

* The lamb will never cease to follow him.

[Shout within. A Lancaster! A Lancaster!]

* Exe. Hark, hark, my Lord! what shouts these?

251

K. Edw. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry, bear him hence.

* You are the fount, that makes small brooks
to flow;

* Now stops thy spring; my sea shall suck them dry.

* And swell so much the higher by their clb. —

'Hence with him to the Tower; let him not speak.'

[Exeunt some with King Henry.]

‘ And, Lords, towards Coventry bend we our course.

'Where peremptory Warwick now remains:

'The sun shines hot, and, if we use delay,

' Cold biting winter mars our hop'd-for hay.

* And take the great-grown traitor unawares:

 Brave warriors, march amain towards Coventry:

ter, upon the walls, WARWICK, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and Others.

Var. Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford?

far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?

1. Mes. By this at Dunsmore, march hitherward,

War. How far off is our brother Montague?
Where is the post that came from Montague?

2. Mes. By this at Daintry, with a full troop,

Enter Sir JOHN SOMERVILLE,

War. Say, Somerville, what says my son?

And, by thy guess, how nigh is Clarence?

Som. At Southam did I leave him with forces,

And do expect him here some two hours hence.
[Drum heard]

War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hear drum.

Som. It is not his, my Lord; here Southam lies;

*The drum your Honour hears, marcheth
Warwick.*

War. Who should that be? belike, unlooked for friends.

Som. They are at hand, and you quickly know,

Drums. Enter King EDWARD, GLOSTER, forces, marching.

K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, sound a parle.

Glo. See, how the surly Warwick man wall.

War. O, unbid spite! is sportful Edward come?

Where slept our scouts, or how are they seduc'd,
That we could hear no news of his repair?

* K. Edw. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates,

* Speak gentle words, and humbly bend thy knee? —

* Call Edward — King, and at his hands beg
mercy,

* And he shall pardon thee these outrages,

* War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence,

Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee down? —

Call Warwick — patron, and he penitent;

And thou shalt still remain the Duke of York.

Glo. I thought, at least, he would have said —
the King;

Or did he make the jest against his will?

* War. Is not a dukedom, Sir, a goodly gift?

* Glo. Ay, by my faith, for a poor Earl to give;

* I'll do thee service for so good a gift,

* War. 'Twas I, that gave the kingdom to thy brother.

K. Edw. Why, then 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

* War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight:

And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again;

And Henry is my King, Warwick his subject,

* K. Edw. But Warwick's King is Edward's
prisoner;

* And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this, —
What is the body, when the head is off?

* Glo. Alas, that Warwick had no more forecast,

But, whiles he thought to steal the single ten,

' The King was slily finger'd from the deck!
 You left poor Henry at the Bishop's palace,
 And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower.

K. Edw. 'Tis even so; yet you are Warwick still.

* Glo. Come, Warwick, take the time, kneel down, kneel down:

* Nay, when? strike now, or else the iron cools.

* War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,

* And with the other fling it at thy face,

* Than bear so low a sail, to strike to thee.

* K. Edw. Sail how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend;

* This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair,

* Shall, whiles the head is warm, and new cut off,

* Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood, —

* Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.

Enter Oxford, with drum and colours,

* War. O cheerful colours! see, where Oxford comes!

Oxf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster!

[Oxf. and his forces enter the city.

* Glo. The gates are open, let us enter too.

* K. Edw. So other foes may set upon our backs.

* Stand we in good array; for they, no doubt,

* Will issue out again, and bid us battle:

* If not, the city being but of small defence,

* We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same.

* War. O, welcome, Oxford! for we want thy help.

Enter MONTAGUE, with drum and colours.

Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster!
[He and his forces enter the city.]

* Glo. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason

Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.

* K. Edw. The harder match'd, the greater victory;

* My mind presageth happy gain, and conquest.

Enter SOMERSET, with drum and colours.

Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster!
[He and his forces enter the city.]

Glo. Two of thy name, both Dukes of Somerset,

Have sold their lives unto the house of York;
And thou shalt be the third, if this sword hold.

Enter CLARENCE, with drum and colours.

War. And lo, where George of Clarence sweeps along,

Of force enough to bid his brother battle;

* With whom an upright zeal to right prevails,

* More than the nature of a brother's love: —

* Come, Clarence, come; thou wilt, if Warwick calls.

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means?

[Taking the red rose out of his cap.]
Look here, I throw my infamy at thee.

I will not ruinate my father's house,
Who gave his blood to lime the stones together,
' And set up Lancaster. Why, trow'st thou,
Warwick.

' That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,
' To bend the fatal instrument of war

' Against his brother, and his lawful King?

* Perhaps, thou wilt object my holy oath:

* To keep that oath, were more impiety

* Than Jephthah's, when he sacrific'd his daughter.

* I am so sorry for my trespass made,

‘ That, to deserve well at my brother’s hands,

* I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe;

* With resolution, wheresoe'er I meet thee,

* (As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad,)

* To plague thee for thy foul misleading me.

And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee;

And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks. —

'Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends;

‘ And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults,

‘ For I will henceforth be no more unconstant. ’

' K. Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd.

Than if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate.

Glo. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother-like.

War. O passing traitor, perjur'd, and unjust!

K. Edw. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town, and fight?

Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?

War. Alas, I am not coop'd here for defence:

I will away towards Barnet presently,
And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st.

A. Bow. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way: —

Lords, to the field; saint George, and victory; [March. Exeunt.

A field of battle near Barnet.

Alarums, and Excursions. Enter King EDWARD, bringing in WARWICK wounded.

- * K. Edw. So, lie thou there: die thou, and die our fear;
 * For Warwick was a bug, that fear'd us all. —
 * Now, Montague, sit fast; I seek for thee,
 * That Warwick's bones may keep thine company,
 [Exit.

War. Ah, who is nigh? come to me, friend, or foe,

And tell me, who is victor, York, or Warwick?
 Why ask I that? my mangled body shows,

- * My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shows,

That I must yield my body to the earth,
 And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe.

Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge,

Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle,

Under whose shade the ramping lion slept;

Whose top branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading tree,

- * And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind.

 black veil,

The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with blood,

And, live we how we can, yet die we must.

Enter OXFORD and SOMERSET.

And more he would have said; and more spoke,

‘ Which sounded like a cannon in a vault,
‘ That might not be distinguish’d; but, at last,
‘ I well might hear deliver’d with a groan, —
‘ O, farewell, Warwick!

War. Sweet rest his soul! —

Fly, Lords, and save yourselves; for Warwick bids \

You all farewell, to meet again in heaven. [Dies.

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the Queen’s great power!

[Exeunt, bearing off Warwick’s body;

Another part of the field.

Flourish. Enter King EDWARD in triumph; with CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and the rest.

‘ K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,

‘ And we are grac’d with wreaths of victory.

‘ But, in the midst of this bright-shining day,

‘ I spy a black, suspicious, threat’ning cloud,

‘ That will encounter with our glorious sun,

‘ Ere he attain his easeful western bed;

‘ I mean, my Lords, those powers, that the Queen

‘ Hath rais’d in Gallia, have arriv’d our coast,

‘ And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

* Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud,

* And blow it to the source from whence it came:

* Thy very beams will dry those vapours up;

* For every cloud engenders not a storm.

* Glo. The Queen is valu'd thirty thousand strong,
 ' And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her;
 ' If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd,
 Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advertis'd by our loving friends,
 That they do hold their course toward Tewks-bury;
 ' We, having now the best at Barnet field,
 ' Will thither straight, For willingness rids way;
 ' And, as we march, our strength will be augmented.

In every county as we go along. —
 Strike up the drum; cry — Courage! and away.

 , is not Oxford here another anchor?
 Somerset another goodly mast?
 friends of France our shrouds and tacklings?
 , though unskilful, why not Ned and I once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge?
 will not from the helm, to sit and weep;
 keep our course, though the rough wind
 say — no, n shelves and rocks that threaten us with wreck.
 ood to chide the waves, as speak them fair.
 what is Edward, but a ruthless sea?
 t Clarence, but a quicksand of deceit?
 Richard, but a ragged fatal rock?
 these the enemies to our poor bark.
 , you can swim; alas, 'tis but a while:
 ud, on the sand; why, there you quickly sink:
 ride the rock; the tide will wash you off,
 else you furnish, that's a threefold death.
 , speak I, Lords, to let you understand,
 ase some one of you would fly from us, t there's no hop'd-for mercy with the here-
 there,

THIRD PART OF

* More than with ruthless waves, with sands, and rocks.

* Why, courage, then! what cannot be avoided,
* 'Twere childish weakness to lament, or fear.

* Prince. Methinks, a woman of this vallant spirit

* Should, if a coward heard her speak these
words,

* Infuse his breast with magnanimity,
* And make him, naked, foil a man at arms.

* I speak not this, as doubting any here:
* For, did I but suspect a fearful man,

* He should have leave to go away betimes;
* Lest, in our need, he might infect another;

* And make him of like spirit to himself.
* If any such be here, as God forbid!

* Let him depart, before we need his help.

* Oxf. Women and children of so high a
And warriors faint! why, 'twere perpetual courage! shame. —

* O, brave young Prince! thy famous grandfather Doth live again in thee; Long may'st thou live,
To bear his image, and renew his glories!

* Som. And he, that will not fight for such a hope,

* Go home to bed, and, like the owl by day,
If he arise, be mock'd and wonder'd at.

* Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset; — sweet Oxford, thanks.

* Prince. And take his thanks, that yet hath nothing else.

KING HENRY VI.

Enter a Messenger.

- Mes.* Prepare you, Lords, for Edward is at hand,
 Ready to fight; therefore be resolute.
Oxf. I thought no less: it is his policy,
 To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.
Som. But he's deceiv'd, we are in readiness.
Q. Mar. This cheers my heart, to see your forwardness.
Oxf. Here pitch our battle, hence we will not budge.

March. Enter, at a distance, King EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and forces.

- K. Edw.* Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood,
 Which, by the heavens' assistance, and your strength,
 Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.
 * I need not add more fuel to your fire,
 * For, well I wot, yè blaze to burn them out:
 * Give signal to the fight, and to it, Lords.
Q. Mar. Lords, Knights, and Gentlemen, what I should say,
 My tears gainsay; for every word I speak;
 Ye see, I drink the water of my eyes.
 Therefore, no more but this: — Henry, your Sovereign,
 Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,
 His realm a slaughterhouse, his subjects slain;
 His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent;
 And yonder is the wolf, that makes this spoil.

THIRD PART OF

' You fight in justice: then, in God's name
Lords,

' Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.

[Exeunt both Armies.]

SCENE V.

Another part of the same.

Alarums; Excursions; and afterwards a Retreat. Then Enter King EDWARD, CLARENCES, GLOSTER, and forces; with Queen MARGARET, OXFORD, and SOMERSET, prisoners.

' K. Edw. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils.

Away with Oxford to Hammes' castle straight:
For Somerset, off with his guilty head.

' Go, bear them hence; I will not hear them
speak.

Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words.

' Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my fortune.

[Exeunt OXFORD and SOMERSET, guarded.]

* Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous world,

* To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.

* K. Edw. Is proclamation made, — the who finds Edward,

* Shall have a high reward, and he his life?

* Glo. It is; and, lo, where youthful Edw
comes.

Enter Soldiers, with Prince EDWARD.

* K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak:

* What! can so young a thorn begin to prick? —

* Edward, what satisfaction can'st thou make,

* For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,

* And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to?

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York!

Suppose, that I am now my father's mouth;

Resign thy chair, and, where I stand, kneel thou,

Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee,

Which, traitor, thou would'st have me answer to.

Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resolv'd!

* Glo. That you might still have worn the petticoat,

And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster.

Prince. Let Aesop fable in a winter's night;

His currish riddles sort not with this place.

Glo. By heaven, brat, I'll plague you for that word.

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men.

Glo. For God's sake, take away this captive scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back rather.

* K. Edw. Peace wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue.

Clar. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.

Prince. I know my duty, you are all undutiful:

civous Edward, — and thou perjur'd George, —

And thou mishapen Dick, — I tell ye all,
I am your better, traitors as ye are; —

* I'll hence to London on a serious matter

* Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some Clar. What? what?

* Glo. The Tower, the Tower!

* Q. Mar. O, Ned, sweet Ned! speak mother, boy!

* Canst thou not speak? — O traitors!
ere! —

They, that stabb'd Caesar, shed no blood
Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame

* He was a man; this, in respect, a child
And men ne'er spend their fury on a child

* What's worse than murderer, that name it?

* No, no; my heart will burst, an if I

* And I will speak, that so my heart may burst. —

* Butchers and villains, bloody cannibals!

* How sweet a plant have you untimely cropp'd!

* You have no children, butchers! if you had,

* The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse:

* But, if you ever chance to have a child,

Look in his youth to have him so cut off,

* As, deathsmen! you have rid this sweet young Prince,

perforce.

* Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence; despatch me here;

Here sheath thy sword, I'll pardon thee my death:

What! wilt thou not? — then, Clarence, do it thou.

* Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much case;

* Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.

* Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear, I would not do it?

* Q. Mar. Ay, but thou usest to forswear thyself;

'Twas sin before, but now 'tis charity.

* What! wilt thou not? where is that devil's butcher,

Hard-favour'd Richard? Richard, where art thou?

Thou art not here: Murder is thy alma-deed;

Petitioners for blood thou ne'er put'st back.

* K. Edw. Away, I say; I charge ye, bear her
hence.

Q. Mar. So come to you, and yours, as to this Prince!

[Exit, led out forcibly.]

K. Edw. Where's Richard gone?

Clar. To London, all in post; and, as I guess,
To make a bloody supper in the Tower.

K. Edw. He's sudden, if a thing comes in his head.

' Now march we hence: discharge the common sorrow

' With pay and thanks, and let's away to London

' And see our gentle Queen how well she fares;

' By this, I hope, she hath a son for me.

[Exeunt]

SCENE VI.

London. A Room in the Tower.

King HENRY is discovered sitting with a book in his hand, the Lieutenant attending. Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Good day, my Lord! What, at your book so hard?

K. Hen. Ay, my good Lord: My Lord, should say rather.

'Tis sin to flatter, good was little better;

Good Gloster, and good devil, were alike,

* And both preposterous; therefore, not good Lord,

* Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must confer.

[Exit Lieutenant.]

* K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf:

* So first the harmless 'sheep doth yield his fleece,
* And next his throat unto the butcher's knife. —
What scene of death hath Roscius now to act?

Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind;
The thief doth fear each bush an officer.

* K. Hen. The bird, that hath been limed in a bush:

* With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush;
And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,
Have now the fatal object in my eye,
Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught;
and kill'd.

* Glo. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete,

* That taught his son the office of a fowl?

* And yet, for all his wings, the fowl was drown'd.

* K. Hen. I Daedalus; my poor boy, Icarus;
Thy father, Minos, that deny'd our course;

* The sun, that sear'd the wings of my sweet boy,

* Thy brother Edward; and thyself, the sea,

* Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.

* Ah, kill me with thy weapon, not with words!

* My breast can better brook thy dagger's point,
Than can my ears that tragick history. —

* But wherefore dost thou come? is't for my life?

* Glo. Think'st thou, I am an executioner?

K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art;

* If murdering innocents be executing,

* Why, then thou art an executioner.

Glo. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.

K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd, when first thou didst presume,
 Thou had'st not liv'd to kill a son of mine.
 ' And thus I prophecy, — that many a thousand,
 ' Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear;
 ' And many an old man's sigh, and many a widow's,
 ' And many an orphan's water-standing eye. —
 ' Men for their sons, wives for their husbands' fate,
 ' And orphans for their parents' timeless death, —
 ' Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.
 The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign;
 ' The night-crow cry'd, aboding luckless time;
 Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempests shook down trees;
 The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,
 And chattering pies in dismal discords sung.
 Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain,
 And yet brought forth less than a mother's hope;
 ' To wit, — an indigest deformed lump,
 Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree.
 Teeth hadst thou in thy head, when thou wast
 born,
 To signify, — thou cam'st to hite the world:
 And if the rest be true which I have heard,
 ' Thou cam'st —

Glo. I'll hear no more; — Die, prophet, in thy speech;

[Stabs him.

For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd.

K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this.

O God! forgive my sins, and pardon thee!

[Dies.

Glo. What will the aspiring blood of Lancaster Sink in the ground? I thought, it would have mounted.

See, how my sword weeps for the poor King's death!

'O, may such purple tears be alway shed

'From those that wish the downfall of our house! —

• 'If any spark of life be yet remaining,

Down, down to hell; and say — I sent thee thither.

[Stabs him again,

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear —

Indeed, 'tis true, that Henry told me of;

For I have often heard my mother say,

I came into the world with my legs forward;

Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste,

'And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right?

The midwife wonder'd; and the women cry'd,

O, Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth!

'And so I was; which plainly signify'd —

That I should snarl, and bite, and play the dog,

'Then, since the heavens have shap'd my body
so,

Let hell make crook'd my mind, to answer it.

I have no brother, I am like no brother:

'And this word — love, which greybeard's call divine,

Be resident in men like one another,

And not in me; I am myself alone. —

Clarence, beware; thou keep'st me from the light;

But I will sort a pitchy day for thee;

Krit.

The same. A Room in the Palace.

King EDWARD is discovered sitting on his throne; Queen ELIZABETH with the infant Prince, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, HASTINGS, and Others, near him.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal throne.

Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies.
What valiant foemen, like to autumn's corn,
Have we mow'd down, in tops of all their pride?

Three Dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd
For hardy and undoubted champions;
Two Cliffords, as the father and the son,
And two Northumberlands; two braver men
Ne'er spur'd their coursers at the trumpet's sound:
' With them, the two brave bears, Warwick and Montague,

That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion,
 And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.
 Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,
 And made our footstool of security. —
 Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy: —
 Young Ned, for thee, thine uncles, and myself,
 Have in our armours watch'd the winter's night;
 'Went all afoot in summer's scalding heat,
 That thou might'st repossess the crown in peace;
 And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain.

Glo. I'll blast his harvest, if your head were lay'd;

For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
 This shoulder was ordain'd so thick, to heave;
 And heave it shall some weight, or break my back: —

Work thou the way, — and thou shalt execute,

[Aside.

K. Edw. Clarence, and Gloster, love my lovely Queen;
 And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.

Clar. The duty, that I owe unto your Majesty,
 I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe.

K. Edw. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother thanks.

'Glo. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,

'Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit: —

To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his Master

'And cry'd — all hail! when as he } Aside.
 meant — all harm.

K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
 Having my country's peace, and brothers' loves.

Clara. What will your Grace have done w.
Margaret?

Reignier, her father, to the King of France
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
And hither have they sent it for her ransom.

K. Edw. Away with her, and waite her hen to France.

And now what rests, but that we spend t time

With stately triumphs, mirthful comick shows,
Such as befit the pleasures of the court? —

Sound, drums and trumpets! — farewell, so annoy!

For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.

KING HENRY VI. PART II.

*. * This and The Third Part of King Henry VI. contain that troublesome period of this Prince's reign which took in the whole contention betwixt the houses of York and Lancaster: and under that title were these two plays first acted and published. The present scene opens with King Henry's marriage, which was in the twenty-third year of his reign [A. D. 1445]: and closes with the first battle fought at St. Albans, and won by the York faction, in the thirty-third year of his reign [A. D. 1455]: so that it comprizes the history and transactions of ten years. THEOBALD.

This play was altered by Crowne, and acted in the year 1681. STEEVENS.

In a note prefixed to the preceding play, I have briefly stated my opinion concerning the drama now before us, and that which follows it; to which the original editors of Shakspeare's works in folio have given the titles of The Second and Third Parts of King Henry VI.

The Contention of the two famous houses of Yorke and Lancaster in two parts, was published in quarto, in 1600; and the first part was entered on the Stationer's books, (as Mr. Steevens has observed,) March 12, 1593-4. On these two plays, which I believe to have been written by some preceding author, before the year 1690, Shakspeare formed, as I conceive, this and the following drama: altering; retrenching, or amplifying, as he thought proper. The reasons on which this hypothesis is founded, I shall subjoin at large at the end of The third part of King Henry VI. At present it is only necessary to apprize the reader of the method observed in the printing of these plays. All the lines printed in the usual manner, are found in the original quarto plays (or at least with such minute variations as are not worth noticing); and those, I conceive, Shakspeare adopted as he found them. The lines to which inverted commas are prefixed, were, if my hypothesis be well founded, retouched, and greatly improved by him; and those with asterisks were his own original production; the embroidery with which he ornamented the coarse stuff that had been awkwardly made up for the stage by some of his contemporaries. The speeches which he new-modelled, he improved, sometimes by amplification, and sometimes by retrenchment.

These two pieces, I imagine, were produced in their present form in 1591. See An Attempt to ascertain the order of Shakspeare's plays, Vol. I. and the Dissertation at the end of The third part of King Henry VI. Dr. Johnson observes very justly, that these two parts were not written without a dependance on the first. Undoubtedly not; the old play of King Henry VI. (or, as it is now called, The First Part), certainly had been exhibited before these were written in any form. But it does not follow from this concession, either that The Contention of the two Houses, &c. in two parts, was written by the author of the former play, or that Shakspeare was the author of these two pieces as they originally appeared. MALONE.

Page 5, line 12. and fol. Suf. As by your high imperial Majesty

I had in charge &c.] Vide Hall's Chronicle, fol. 66, year 23. init. POPE.

It is apparent that this play begins where the former ends, and continues the series of transactions of which it presupposes the first part already known. This is a sufficient proof that the second and third parts were not written without dependance on the first, though they were printed as containing a complete period of history. JOHNSON.

Alder-lievest is an old English word given to him to whom the speaker is supremely attached, lievest being the superlative of the comparative levar, rather, from lief. WARBURTON.

P. 18, l. 7. — and then we may deliver supplications in the quill.] In quill is Sir Thomas Hanmer's reading; the rest have — in quill. JOHNSON.

Perhaps our supplications in the quill, a quill, means no more than our written or printed supplications. We still say, a drawing in c for a drawing executed by the use of chalk.

STEER

In the quill may mean, with great exactness and observance of form, or with the utmost pretence of ceremony. The phrase seems to be derived from part of the dress of our ancestors, whose ruffs were quilled. While these were worn, it might be the vogue to say, such a thing is in quill, i. e. in the reigning mode of taste. To

To this observation I may add, that after printing began, the similar phrase of a thing being in print was used to express the same circumstance of exactness. "All this," (declares one of the quibbling servants in The Two Gentlemen Verona) “I say in print, for in print I found it.”

STEEVENS.

In quill may be supposed to have been a phrase formerly in use, and the same with the French en quille, which is said of a man, when he stands upright upon his feet without stirring from the place. The proper sense of quille in French is a quill-pen, and, in some parts of England, quill-pens are still called cayls, which word is used in the statute 53 Henry VIII. c. 9. Quelle in the old British language also signifies any piece of wood set upright. HAWKINS.

P. 19, l. 6. That my master was!] The old copy—that my mistress was? The present emendation was supplied by Mr. Tyrwhitt, and has the concurrence of Mr. M. Mason. STEEVENS.

The context shows clearly that mistress was a misprint for master. The mistake arose from these words being formerly abbreviated in Mss.; and an M. stood for either one or the other.

of fingers. This adjuration is, however, very ancient. STEEVENS.

P. 26, l. 10. The word exorcise, and its derivatives, are used by Shakspeare in an uncommon sense. In all other writers it means to lay spirits but in these plays it invariably means to raise them. M. MASON.

P. 26, l. 27. The silent of the night is a classical expression, and means an interlunar night — Amica silentia lunae. So Pliny, Inter omnes verò convenit, utilissime in coitu ejus sterna, quem diem alii interlunii, alii silenti lunae appellant. lib. xvi. cap. 39. In imitation of this language, Milton says:

“ The sun to me is dark,
 “ And silent as the moon,
 “ When she deserts the night,
 “ Hid in her vacant interlunar cave.”

WARBURTON

I believe this display of learning might have been spared. Silent, though an adjective, is used by Shakspeare as a substantive. So, in The Tempest, the vast of night is used for the greater part of it. The old quarto reads, the silence of the night; STEEVENS.

Steeven's explanation of this passage is evidently right; and Warburton's observations on it, though long, learned, and laborious, are nothing to the purpose. Bolingbroke does not talk of the silence of the moon, but of the silence of the night; no is he describing the time of the month, but the hour of the night. M. MASON.

P. 26, l. 29. — bandogs howl,] I was unacquainted with the etymology of this word, till it was pointed out to me by an ingenious correspondent in the Supplement to the Gentleman

Magazine for 1789, who signs himself D. T. "Shakespeare's ban-dog (says he) is simply a village-dog, or mastiff, which was formerly called a band-dog, per syncope, bandog. STEEVENS, Ban-dog is surely a corruption of band-dog; or rather the first d is, suppressed here, as in other compound words. Cole in his Dict. 1679, renders ban-dog, canis catenatus. MALONE.

I am told by a gentleman, better acquainted with falconry than myself, that the meaning, however expressed, is, that the wind being high, it was ten to one that the old hawk had flown quite away; a trick which hawks often play their masters in windy weather. JOHNSON, i. e. the wind was so high it was ten to one that old Joan would not have taken her flight at the game. PERCY.

The ancient books of hawking do not come to decide on the merits of such discordant planations. It may yet be remarked, that the belonging to this once popular amusement was general settled with the utmost precision; may at least venture to declare, that a man might have been kept at a cheaper rate than a falcon. To compound a medicine to cure of these birds of worms, it was necessary to do no fewer animals than a lamb, a culver; a pi, a buck and a cat. I have this intelligence from the Booke of Haukinge, &c. bl. l. no date. The verse is lame enough after the emendation nor does the negative particle improve the sense. When words are omitted it is not often easy to say what they were if there is a perfect sense without them. I read, but somewhat at random:

P. 39, l. 34 35. And, but for Owen Glendower, had been King,

Who kept him in captivity, till he died.]

I have observed in a former note, (p. 361. to the First Part, Act II. sc. v.) that the historians as well as the dramatick poets have been strangely mistaken concerning this Edmond Mortimer, Earl of March, who was so far from being "kept in captivity till he died," that he appears to have been at liberty during the whole reign of King Henry V. and to have been trusted and employed by him; and there is no proof that he ever was confined, as a state-prisoner, by King Henry IV. Being only six years of age at the death of his father in 1398, he was delivered by Henry in ward to his son Henry Prince of Wales; and during the whole of that reign, being a minor and related to the family on the throne, both he and his brother Roger were under the particular care of the King. At the age of ten years, in 1402, he headed a body of Herefordshire men against Owen Glendower; and they being routed, he was taken prisoner by Owen, and is said by Walsingham to have contracted a marriage with Glendower's daughter, and to have been with him at the battle of Shrewsbury; but I believe the story of his being affianced to Glendower's daughter is a mistake, and that the historian has confounded Mortimer with Lord Gray of Ruthvin, who was likewise taken prisoner by Glendower, and actually did marry his daughter. Edmond Mortimer Earl of March married Anne Stafford, the daughter of Edmond Earl of Stafford. If he was at the battle of Shrewsbury he was probably fought there against his will, to grace the cause of the rebels. The Percies in the Manifesto which they published a little before that battle, speak of him, not as a confederate of Owen's, but as the rightful heir to the crown, whom Owen had confined, and whom, finding that the King for political reasons would not ransom him, they at their own charges had ransomed. After that battle, he was certainly under the care of the King, he and his brother in the seventh year of that reign having had annuities of two hundred pounds and one hundred marks allotted to them, for their maintenance during their minorities.

In addition to what I have already said respecting the trust reposed in him during the whole reign of King Henry V. I may add, that in the sixth year of that King this Earl of March was with the Earl of Salisbury at the siege of Fresnes; and soon afterwards with the King himself at the siege of Melun. In the same year he was constituted LIEUTENANT OF NORMANDY. He attended Henry when he had an interview with the French King, &c. at Melun, to treat about a marriage with Catharine, and he accompanied the Queen when she returned from France in 1422, with the corpse of her husband.

One of the sources of the mistakes in our old histories concerning this Earl, I believe, was this: he was probably confounded with one of his kinsmen, a Sir John Mortimer, who was confined for a long time in the Tower, and at last was executed in 1424. That person however, could not have been his uncle; for he had but one legitimate uncle, and his name was Edmond. The Sir John Mortimer, who was confined in the Tower, was perhaps cousin german to the last Edmond Earl of March, the illegitimate son of his uncle Edmond.

I take this opportunity of correcting an inaccuracy in the note above referred to. I have said that Lionel Duke of Clarence was married to Elizabeth the daughter of the Earl of Ulster, in 1360. I have since learned that he was affianced to her in his tender years; and consequently Lionel, having been born in 1338, might have had his daughter Philippa in 1554. Philippa, I find, was married in 1370, at the age of sixteen, to Edmond Mortimer Earl of March, who was himself born in 1351. Their son Roger was born in 1371, and must have been married to Eleanor, the daughter of the Earl of Kent, in the year 1388, or 1389, for their daughter Anne, who married Richard Earl of Cambridge, was born in 1389. Edmond Mortimer, Roger's eldest son, (the Mortimer of Shakspeare's King Henry IV. and the person who has given occasion to this tedious note,) was born in the latter end of the year 1392; and consequently when he died in his castle at Trim in Ireland, in 1424-5, he was thirty-two years old.

Where I may sit and sigh in endless moan,

For who's a traitor, Gloster he is none.

If therefore, according to the conjecture already suggested, these plays were originally the composition of another author, the speech before us belongs to Shakspeare. It is observable that one of the expressions in it is found in his Richard II. and in The Rape of Lucrece; and in perusing the subsequent lines one cannot help recollecting the trade which his father has by some been supposed to have followed. MALONE.

P. 57, l. 26. 27. And as the butcher takes away the calf,

And binds the wretch, and beats it when it strays,] But how can it stray when it is bound? The poet certainly intended when it strives; i. e. when it struggles to get loose. And so he elsewhere employs this word THIRLBY.

This emendation is admitted by the succeeding editors, and I had once put it in the text. I am, however, inclined to believe that in this passage, as in many, there is a confusion of ideas, and that the poet had at once before him a butcher carrying a calf bound, and a butcher driving a calf to the slaughter, and beating him when he did not keep the path. Part of the line was suggested by one image, and part by another, so that strive is the best word, but stray is the right.

JOHNSON.

There needs no alteration. It is common for butchers to tie a rope or halter about the neck of a calf when they take it away from the breeder's farm, and to beat it gently if it attempts to stray from the direct road. The Duke of Gloster is borne away like the calf, that is, he is taken away upon his feet; but he is not carried away as a burthen on horseback, or upon men's shoulders, or in their hands. TOLLET.

P. 59, l. 19—22. No; let him die, in that he is a fox,

*By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock,
Before his'chaps be stain'd with crimson

As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my Liege.] The meaning of the speaker is not hard to be discovered; but his expression is very much perplexed. He means that the fox may be lawfully killed, as being known to be by nature an enemy to sheep, even before he has actually killed them; so Humphrey may be properly destroyed, as being proved by arguments to be the King's enemy; before he has committed any actual crime.

Some may be tempted to read treasons for reasons, but the drift of the argument is to show that there may be reason to kill him before any treason has broken out. JOHNSON.

This passage, as Johnson justly observes, is perplexed, but the perplexity arises from an error that ought to be corrected, which it may be by the change of a single letter. What is it that Humphrey proved by reasons to the King? — This line, as it stands, is absolutely nonsense: — But if we read Humphrey's, instead of Humphrey, and reason instead of reasons, the letter s having been transferred through inadvertency from one word to the other, the meaning of Suffolk will be clearly expressed; and if we enclose also the third line in a parenthesis, the passage will scarcely require either explanation or comment:

No; let him die, in that he is a fox,
By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock,
(Before his chaps be stained with crimson blood)

As Humphrey's prov'd by reason to my Liege.

Suffolk's argument is this: — As Humphrey is the next heir to the crown, it is as imprudent to make him protector to the King, as it would be to make the fox surveyor of the fold; and as we kill a fox before he has actually worried any of the sheep, because we know that by nature he is an enemy to the flock, so we should get rid of Humphrey, because we know that he must be by reason an enemy to the King. Anno 1560, the third of Elizabeth, — "For two dossin of Morres bells." As these appear to have been purchased by the community, we may suppose this diversion was constantly practised at their publick festivals. STEEVENS.

The editor of The Sad Shepherd, 8vo. 1783, p. 255, mentions seeing a company of morrice-dancers from Abington, at Richmond in Surrey, so late as the summer of 1783. They appeared to be making a kind of annual circuit.

REED.

P. 65, l. 13. 14. I thank thee, Margaret; &c.] In former editions:

I thank thee, Nell, these words content me much.

This is King Henry's reply to his wife Margaret. There can be no reason why he should forget his own wife's name, and call her Nell instead of Margaret. As the change of a single letter sets all right, I am willing to suppose it came from his pen thus:

I thank thee. Well, these words content me much. THEOBALD.

It has been observed by two or three commentators, that it is no way extraordinary the King should forgot his wife's name, as it appears in no less than three places that she forgets it herself, calling herself Eleanor. It has also been said, that, if any contr. ction of the real name is used, it should be Me. All this is very true; but as an alteration must be made, Theobald's is just as good, and as probable, as any other. I have, therefore, retained it, and wish it could have been done with propriety without a note. REED.

Though the King could not well forget his wife's name, either Shakspeare or the transcriber might. That Nell is not a mistake of the press for Well, is clear from a subsequent speech of the Queen's in this scene, where Eleanor, the name of the Duchess of Gloster, is again three times printed instead of Margaret. No reason can be assigned why the proper correction should be made in all those places, and not here. MALONE.

I have admitted Mr. Malone's correction; and yet must remark, that while it is favourable to sense it is injurious to metre. STEEVENS.

P. 69, l. 27. 28. — and to drain

Upon his face an ocean of salt tears;]
This is one of our poet's harsh expressions. As when a thing is drain'd, drops of water issue from it, he licentiously uses the word here in the sense of dropping, or distilling. MALONE.

Surely our author wrote rain, not drain. The discharge of a single letter furnishes what seems to me a necessary emendation. STEEVENS.

P. 70, l. 1-4. The folding doors of an inner chamber are thrown open, &c.] This stage-direction I have inserted as best suited to the exhibition. The stage-direction in the quarto is — "Warwick draws the curtaines, [i. e. draws the open] and shows Duke Humphrey in his bed." In the folio: "A bed with Gloster's body forth." These are some of the many circumstances which prove, I think, decisively, that the theatres of our author's time were unfurnished scenes. In those days, as I conceive, curtains occasionally hung across the middle of the stage on an iron rod, which, being drawn open, disclosed a second apartment, when a change of scene was required. The direction in the folio "put forth a bed," was merely to the proper person to thrust a bed forwards behind those previous to their being drawn open. MALONE.

For seeing him, I see my death in life.

That is, seeing him I live to see my own destruction. Thus it will aptly correspond with the first line:

Come hither, gracious Sovereign, view this body.

K. Henry. That is to see how deep my grave is made. JOHNSON.

Surely the poet's meaning is obvious as the words now stand. — I see my life destroyed or endangered by his death. PERCY.

I think the meaning is, I see my life in the arms of death; I see my life expiring, or rather expired. The conceit is much in our author's manner. MALONE.

P. 70, l. 22. Oft have I seen a timely-part-ed ghost,] All that is true of the body of a dead man is here said by Warwick of the soul. I would read:

Oft have I seen a timely-parted corse.

But of two common words how or why was one changed for the other? I believe the transcriber thought that the epithet timely-parted could not be used of the body, but that, as in Hamlet there is mention of peace-parted souls, so here timely-parted must have the same substantive. He removed one imaginary difficulty, and made many real. If the soul is parted from the body, the body is likewise parted from the soul.

I cannot but stop a moment to observe, that this horrible description is scarcely the work of any pen but Shakspeare's. JOHNSON.

This is not the first time that Shakspeare has

Cade. Inspired with the spirit, &c. TYRWHITT.

In the old play the corresponding passage stands thus:

Cade. I John Cade, so named for my valiancy, —

Dick. Or rather for stealing of a cade of sprats.

The transposition recommended by Mr Tyrwhitt is so plausible, that I had once regulated the text accordingly. But Dick's quibbling on the word of (which is used by Cade, according to the phraseology of our author's time, for by, and as employed by Dick signifies — on account of;) is so much in Shakspeare's manner, that no change ought, I think, to be made. If the words, "Or rather of stealing," &c. be postponed to — "For our enemies shall fall before us," Dick then, as at present, would assert — that Cade is not so called on account of a particular theft; which indeed would correspond sufficiently with the old play; but the quibble on the word of, which appears very like a conceit of Shakspeare, would be destroyed. Cade, as the speeches stand in the folio, proceeds to assign the origin of his name without paying any regard to what Dick has said.

P. 100, l. 14, 15. — thou say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord!] Say was the old word for silk; on this depends the series of degradation, from say to serge, from serge to buckram. JOHNSON.

It appears from Minshew's Dict. 1617, that say was a kind of serge. It is made entirely of wool. There is a considerable manufactory of say at Sudbury near Colchester. This stuff is frequently dyed green, and is yet used by some mechanicks in aprons. MALONE.

Shakspeare might have been led into this mistake by Daniel, in the sixth book of his Civil Wars, who introduces printing and artillery as contemporary inventions. STEEVENS.

pointed [in the old copy] so as to make s

clare that he preferred clerks to maintain Kent and the King. This is not very clear; and, besides, he gives in the following line another reason of his bounty, that learning raised him, and therefore he supported learning. I am inclined to think Kent slipped into this passage by chance and would read:

*When have I aught exacted at your hand,
But to maintain the King, the realm and you?* JOHNSON.

I concur with Dr. Johnson in believing the word Kent to have been shuffled into the text by accident. Lord Say, as the passage stands in the folio, not only declares he had preferred men of learning to maintain Kent, the King, the realm, but adds tautologically you; for it should be remembered that they are Kentish men to whom he is now speaking. I would read, Bent to maintain, &c. i. e. strenuously resolved to the utmost; to, &c. STEVENS.

The punctuation to which Dr. Johnson alludes, is that of the folio:

When have I aught exacted at your hands?
Kent to maintain, the King, the realm, and
you,
Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks, &c.

I have pointed the passage differently, the former punctuation appearing to me to render it nonsense. I suspect, however, with the preceding editors, that the word Kent is a corruption.

Old copy. — the help of a hatchet. But we have here, as Dr. Farmer observed to me, a strange corruption. The help of a hatchet is little better than nonsense; and it is almost certain our author originally wrote pap with a hatchet; alluding to Lyly's pamphlet with the same title, which made its appearance about the time when this play is supposed to have been written. STEEVENS.

We should certainly read — the pap of a hatchet; and are much indebted to Dr. Farmer for so just and happy an emendation. There is no need, however, to suppose any allusion to the title of a pamphlet: It has doubtless been a cant phrase. KIRSON.

I formerly imagined that the word guiltless was misplaced, and that the poet wrote —

But see what it is to be critical: Mr. Theobald says, claim'd should be calm'd, because a calm frequently succeeds a tempest. It may be so; but not here, if the King's word may be Minsheu conjectures that it is derived "a salut, Gal. because it keepeth the head whole from breaking." He adds, "alias salade" dicitur; a. G. salade, idem; utrumque vero celando, quod caput tegit.

The word undoubtedly came to us from the French. In the Stat. 4. and 5. Phil. and Mary, ch. 2. we find — "twentie haquebuts, and twentie morians or salots." MALONE.

P. 111, l. 14-16. As for more words, whose greatness answers words, let this my sword report what speech forbears.] Sir Thomas Hamner, and, after him, Dr. Warburton, read:

As for more words, let this my sword report (Whose greatness answers words) what speech forbears.

It seems to be a poor praise of a sword, that its greatness answers words, whatever be the meaning of the expression. The old reading, though somewhat obscure, seems to me more capable of explanation. For more words, whose pomp and tumour may answer words, and only words, I shall forbear them, and refer the rest to my sword. JOHNSON.

P. 111, l. 32-33. Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,

And hang thee o'er my tomb, when I am dead.] How Iden was so hang a sword over his own tomb, after he was dead; it is not easy to explain. The sentiment is more correctly expressed in the quarto:

Oh, sword, I'll honour thee for this, and in my chamber.

Shalt thou hang, as a monument to after age,
For this great service thou hast done to me.

P. 112, l. 6. How much thou wrong'st me,
That is, in supposing that I am proud of my victory. JOHNSON.

An anonymous writer [Mr. Ritson,] suggests that the meaning may be, that Cade wrongs Iden by undervaluing his prowess, and declaring that he was subdued by famine, not by the valour of his adversary. — I think Dr. Johnson's is the true interpretation. MALONE.

P. 112, l. 11-16. So wish I, I might thrust thy soul to hell,

Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels

*Unto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave,
&c.]* Not to dwell upon the wickedness of this horrid wish, with which Iden debases his character, the whole speech is wild and confused. To drag a man by the heels, headlong, is somewhat difficult; nor can I discover how the dunghill would be his grave, if his trunk were left to be fed upon by crows. These I conceive not to be the faults of corruption but negligence; and therefore do not attempt correction. JOHNSON.

By headlong the poet undoubtedly meant, with his head trailed along the ground. By saying, "the dunghill shall be thy grave," Iden means, the dunghill shall be the place where thy dead body shall be laid: the dunghill shall be the only grave which thou shalt have. Surely in poetry this is allowable. MALONE.

P. 115, l. 6. — balance it.] That is, Balance my hand. JOHNSON.

P. 115, l. 7. A scepter shall it have, have I a soul;] I read: —
A scepter shall it have, have I a sword.

York observes that his hand must be employed with a sword or scepter; he then naturally observes, that he has a sword, and resolves that, if he has a sword, he will have a scepter. JOHNSON.

I rather think York means to say — If I have a soul, my hand shall not be without a scepter.

STEEVENS.

This certainly is a very natural interpretation of these words, and being no friend to alteration merely for the sake of improvement, we ought, I think, to acquiesce in it. But some difficulty will still remain; for if we read, with the old copy, soul, York threatens to “toss the flower-de-luce of France on his scepter,” which sounds but oddly. To toss it on his sword, was a threat very natural for a man who had already triumphed over the French.

However, in the licentious phraseology of our author, York may mean, that he will wield his sceptre, (that is, exercise his royal power,) when he obtains it, so as to abase and destroy the French.

MALONE.

P. 116, l. 3. 4. May Iden live to merit such a bounty,

And never live but true unto his Liege!]
 Iden has said before:

Shakspeare makes Iden rail at those enjoyments which he supposes to be out of his reach; but no sooner are they offered to him but he readily accepts them. ANONYMOUS.

In Iden's eulogium on the happiness of rural life, and in his acceptance of the honours bestowed by his Majesty, Shakspeare has merely followed the old play. MALONE.

P. 117, l. 5-8. — *first let me ask of these,
If they can brook I bow a knee to man. —
Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail;* As these lines stand, I think the sense perplexed and obscure. I have ventured to transpose them.

WARBURTON.

I believe these lines should be replaced in the order, in which they stood till Dr. Warburton transposed them. By these York means his knees. He speaks, as Mr. Upton would have said, δεξιτερῶς: laying his hand upon, or at least pointing to, his knees. TYRWHITT.

By these York evidently means his sons, whom he had just called for. Tyrwhitt's supposition that he meant to ask his knees, whether he should bow his knees to any man, is not imagined with his usual sagacity. M. MASON.

I have no doubt that York means either his son whom he mentions in the next line, or his brother to whom he may be supposed to point. Dr. Warburton transposed the lines, placing that which is now the middle line of the speech at the beginning of it. But, like many of his emendations, it appears to have been unnecessary. The folio — of thee. The emendation was made by Theobald. Sons was substituted for son by the editor of the second folio. The correction is justified both by the context and the old play my enfranchisement, instead of — of it was likewise his correction. MALONE.

P. 117, l. 20: — their father's bail, and bane to these &c.] Considering how our author does to play on words similar in their sound, but opposite in their signification, I make no doubt but the author wrote bail and bale. Bale (from whence our common adjective, baneful) signifies detriment, ruin, misfortune, &c. (THEOBAULT, 1603, and 1611).
A Bale signifies sorrow. Either word may serve.

P. 118, l. 6: — a bedlam and ambitious hu- lunatics till the reign of King Henry the Eighth, who gave it to the city of London for that purpose.

P. 122, l. 22. A dreadful lay!] A dreadful wager; a tremendous stake. JOHNSON.

P. 122, l. 24. Our author, in making Clifford fall by the hand of York, has departed from the truth of history; a practice not uncommon to him when he does his utmost to make his characters considerable. This circumstance, however, serves to prepare the reader or spectator for the vengeance afterwards taken by Clifford's son on York and Rutland.

It is remarkable, that at the beginning of the third part of this historical play, the poet has forgot this occurrence, and there represents Clifford's death as it really happened.

"Lord Clifford and Lord Stafford all abreast,
Charg'd our main battle's front; and breaking in, were slain by the swords of common soldiers."

For this inconsistency the elder poet must answer; for these lines are in The True tragedie of Richard Duke of York, &c. on which, as I conceive, the third part of King Henry VI. was founded. MALONE.

Yet the alteration is not necessary: for the old reading is sense, though obscure. JOHNSON.

P. 125, l. 5. 6. — uncurable discomfit.

The text is undoubtedly right. So, before:

"Hot coals of vengeance."

I have met with part for party in other books of that time. MALONE.

A hundred instances might be brought in proof that part and party were synonymously used. But that is not the present question. Mr. Tyr ear (like every other accustomed to harmony of versification) must naturally have been shocked by the Leonine jingle of heart and part, which is not found in any one of the passages produced by Mr. Malone in defence of the present reading.

Of this sort of friendship, which Shakspeare has frequently noticed in other places, no mention is made in the old play, as the reader may find on the opposite page; and its introduction here is one of the numerous minute circumstances, which when united form almost a decisive proof that the piece before us was constructed on foundations laid by a preceding writer. Where then could York hear this? — The fact is, as we have seen, that in the old play the King does say, "he will call a parliament," but our author has omitted the lines. He has, therefore, here as in some other places, fallen into an impropriety, by sometimes following and at others deserting his original.

NOTES TO

KING HENRY VI. PART III.

* * * The action of this play (which was at first printed under this title, The true Tragedy of Richard Duke of York, and the good King Henry the Sixth; or, The Second Part of the Contention of York and Lancaster) opens just after the first battle at Saint Albans, [May 25, 1455,] wherein the York faction carried the day; and closes with the murder of King Henry VI. and the birth of Prince Edward, afterwards King Edward V. [November 4, 1471,] So that this history takes in the space of full sixteen years.

THEOBALD.

I have never seen the quarto copy of the Second part of THE WHOLE CONTENTION, &c. printed by Valentine Simmes for Thomas Millington, 1600; but the copy printed by W. W. for Thomas Millington, 1600, is now before me; and it is not precisely the same with that described by Mr. Pope, and Mr. Theobald, nor does the undated edition (printed in fact, in 1619) correspond with their description. The title of the piece printed in 1600, by W. W. is as follows: The true Tragedie of Richard Duke of Yorke, and the death of good King Henrie the Sixt: With the whole contention between the two houses Lancaster and Yorke: as it was sundry times acted by the Right Honourable the Earle of Pembroke his Servants. Printed at London by W. W. for Thomas Millington, and are to be sold at his shoppe under St. Peter's Church in Cornewall, 1600. On this piece Shakspeare, as I conceive, in 1591 formed the drama before us. MALONE.

The present historical drama was altered by Crowne, and brought on the stage in the year 1680, under the title of The Miseries of Civil War. Surely the works of Shakspeare could have been little read at that period; for Crowne, in his prologue, declares the play to be entirely his own composition:

"For by his feeble skill 'tis built alone,
"The divine Shakspeare did not lay one stone."

whereas the very first scene is that of Jack Cade copied almost verbatim from the second part of

ing Henry VI. and sec.
ard part, with as little variation.

Page 131, line 2. This play is only divided from the former for the convenience of exhibition; for the series of action is continued without interruption, nor are any two scenes of any play more closely connected than the first scene of this play with the last of the former. JOHNSON.

death. M. MASON.

Dr. Percy in a note on the preceding play, has pointed out the inconsistency between this account and the representation there, Clifford being killed on the stage by the Duke of York, the pre-speaker. Shakspeare was led into this inconsistency by the author of the original plays: if indeed was but one author, for this circumstance lead us to suspect that the first and second of The Contention, &c. were not written is a gross anachronism. At the time of the battle of Saint Albans, at which Richard is represented in the last scene of the preceding to have fought, he was, according to that gentleman's calculation, not one year old, having (he conceives) been born at Fotheringhay castle, October 21, 1454. At the time to which the third scene of the first act of this play is referred, he was, according to the same gentleman's computation, but six years old; and in the fifth act, in which Henry is represented as having been killed by him in the Tower, not more than sixteen and eight months.

For this anachronism the author or authors of the old plays on which our poet founded these two parts of King Henry the Sixth, are answerable. MALONE.

York means, I suppose, that the dukedom of York was his inheritance from his father, as the earldom of March was his inheritance from his mother, Anne Mortimer, the wife of the Earl of Cambridge; and by naming the earldom, he covertly asserts his right to the crown; for his title to the crown was not as Duke of York, but Earl of March. MALONE.

P. 136, l. 4. Thy father was, as thou art,
Duke of York;] This is a mistake, into which Shakspeare was led by the author of the old play. The father of Richard

Duke of York was Earl of Cambridge, and was never Duke of York, being beheaded in the lifetime of his elder brother Edward Duke of York, who fell in the battle of Agincourt. The folio, by an evident error of the press, reads — My father. The true reading was furnished by the old play. MALONE.

P. 136, l. 7. I am the son of Henry the fifth.] The military reputation of Henry the Fifth is the sole support of his son. The name of Henry the Fifth dispersed the followers of Cade. JOHNSON.

P. 137, l. 23. The phrase prejudicial to the crown, if it be right, must mean, detrimental to the general rights of hereditary royalty; but I rather think that the transcriber's eye caught crown from the line below, and that we should read — prejudicial to his son, to his next heir. JOHNSON.

Dr. Percy observes on Dr. Johnson's note, that son could not have been the right word, as Richard the second had no issue; and our author would hardly have used it simply for heir general. Prejudicial to the crown, is right, i. e. to the prerogative of the crown. STEEVENS.

He had been appointed by Warwick vice-admiral of the sea, and had in charge so to keep the passage between Dover and Calais, that none which either favoured King Henry or his friends should escape untaken or undrowned: such, at least, were his instructions, with respect to the friends and favourers of King Edward, after the rupture between him and Warwick. On Warwick's death, he fell into poverty, and robbed, both by sea and land, as well friends as enemies. He once brought his ships up the Thames, and with a considerable body of the men of Kent and Essex, made a spirited assault on the city, with a view to plunder and pillage, which was not repelled but after a sharp conflict and the loss of many lives; and, had it happened at a more critical period, might have been attended with fatal consequences to Edward. After roving on the sea some little time longer, he ventured to land at Southampton, where he was taken and beheaded. See Hall and Hollinshead. RITSON.

P. 142, l. 25. Will cost my crown;] Read coast, i. e. hover over it. WARBURTON.

Dr. Warburton's alteration aims at a distinction without a difference, both cost and coast being ultimately derivations of the same original.

HENLEY.

The word which Dr. Warburton would introduce, has been supposed to violate the metaphor; nor indeed is to coast used as a term of falconry in any of the books professedly written on that subject. To coast is a seafaring expression, and means to keep along shore. We may, however, maintain the integrity of the figure, by inserting the word cote, which is used in Hamlet, and in a sense convenient enough on this occasion:

"We coted them on the way."

To cote is to come up with, to overtake, to reach.

Mr. Tollet therefore observes, that Dr. Warburton's interpretation may be right, as Holinshed often uses the verb to coast, i. e. to hover, or range about any thing. STEEVENS.

Will cost my crown; i. e. will cost me my crown; will induce on me the expence or loss of my crown." MALONE.

Had this been our author's meaning, he would have otherwise formed his verse, and written "cost me my crown." STEEVENS.

P. 143, l. 10. — sons, and brother, I believe we should read — cousin instead of brother, unless brother be used by Shakspeare as a term expressive of endearment, or because they embarked, like brothers, in one cause. MONTAGUE was only cousin to York, and in the quarto he is so called. Shakspeare uses the expression, brother of the war, in King Lear. STEEVENS.

It should be sons and brothers; my sons, and brothers to each other. JOHNSON.

Brother is right. In the two succeeding pages York calls Montague brother. This may be in respect to their being brothers of the war, as Mr. Steevens observes, or of the same council as in King Henry VIII. who says to Cranmer, "You are brother of us." Montague was brother to Warwick; Warwick's daughter was married to a son of York: therefore York and Montague were brothers. But as this alliance did not take place during the life of York, I embrace Mr. Steevens's interpretation rather than suppose that Shakspeare made a mistake about the time of the marriage.

TOLLET.

The third folio reads as Dr. Johnson advises. But as York again in this scene addresses Montague by the title of brother, and Montague uses the same to York, Dr. Johnson's conjecture cannot be right. Shakspeare certainly supposed them to be brothers-in-law. MALONE.

P. 144, l. 7. An oath is of no moment, &c.] The obligation of an oath is here eluded by very despicable sophistry. A lawful magistrate alone has the power to exact an oath, but the oath derives no part of its force from the magistrate. The plea against the obligation of an oath obliging to maintain a usurper, taken from the unlawfulness of the oath itself in the foregoing play, was rational and just. JOHNSON.

P. 143 — 146. to SCENE II.] I know not whether the author intended any moral instruction, but he that reads this has a striking admonition against that precipitancy by which men often means to do that which a little delay honestly in their power. Had York few moments, he had saved his cause from the stain of perjury. JOHNSON.

It will be no more than justice to Y recollect that this scene, so far as respect to his resolution to break it, proceeds from our author's imagination. Neither of March nor Richard was then at Sandstede being likewise a mere child, barely eight years old. His appearance, then, and his actions in this, and, at least, the two following plays, are totally untrue to history and truth.

It may be likewise observed that the Duke was not actually present at this battle, but returned out of Scotland till some little time after the insurrection, which the Duke, not but in strict conformity with his duty to his King, and in discharge of his duty to the realm, had marched from London to suppress, was headed by the Duke of Northumberland, and the Duke who in direct violation of a mutual treaty and before the day prefixed for the battle suddenly upon the Duke's army, killed Salisbury prisoners, and treated him as here described. See Whetstone's Whetstone was next day killed at Pontefract son of the Duke of Exeter, with York, Rutland, and others. W. Worcester. RITSON

In October 1460, when it was resolved in parliament that the Duke of York should be restored to the throne after Henry's death his two sons, the Earl of March and the Earl of Rutland, took an oath to do no act whatsoever that might "sound to the abridgement of the natural life of King Henry the Sixth, or diminishing of his reign or dignity royal." Having persuaded the King to send for the Queen and the Prince of Wales, (who were then in York) and finding that she would not obey his requisition, he on the second of December set out for his castle in Yorkshire, with such military power as he had; a messenger having been previously dispatched to the Earl of March, to desire him to follow his father with all the forces he could procure. The Duke arrived at Sandal castle on the 24th of December, and in a short time his army amounted to five thousand men. An anonymous Remarker, [the author of the preceding note,] however, very confidently asserts, that "this scene, so far as respects York's oath and his resolution to break it, proceeds entirely from the author's imagination." His oath is on record; and what his resolution was when he marched from London at the head of a large body of men, and sent the message above stated to his son, it is not very difficult to conjecture.

The author of the original play appears to have been as incorrect in his chronology as Shakspeare. Rutland was born, I believe, in 1443; according to Hall in 1448; and Clifford's father was at the battle of St. Albans, in 1455. Consequently Rutland was then at least seven years old; probably twelve. The same observation has been made by an anonymous writer. MALONE.

P. 152, l. 6. Putting a paper crown on his head.] Shakspeare has on this occasion deviated from history, if such of our English Chronicles as I have occasionally looked into, may be believed. According to these, the paper crown was not placed on the Duke of York's head till after it had been cut off. Rutland likewise was not killed by Clifford, till after his father's death.

STEEVENS.

The ingenious commentator is most certainly mistaken. Shakspeare, so far from having deviated from history, has followed it with the utmost precision. Whet hamstede expressly tells us, that the Lancastrians, in direct breach of a agreement, and before the day appointed battle, fell suddenly upon the Duke's army, took him and the Earl of Salisbury prisoner, treating both, but especially the Duke, in most shameful manner. Not a single circumstance is omitted, or varied in the scene. It is not ever, imagined that Shakspeare had ever consulted Whethamstede: he found the same story not in some old black letter chronicle, which might possibly have it from a popular tradition.]

According to Hall the paper crown was placed on York's head till after he was dead. Holinshed after giving Hall's narration of this business almost verbatim, adds, — "Some say that the Duke was taken alive, and in due order caused to stand upon a mole-hill, on whose top they put a garland instead of a crowne, which they had fashioned and made of segges or bulrushes, and having so crowned him with that garland they kneeled downe afore him, as the Jew kneeling to Christe in scorne, saying to him, hayl without rule, hayle King without heritage, Duke and Prince without people or power."

He had likewise four daughters. Besides, Clarence was not now more than twelve years old.

Isabel, Duchess of Burgundy, whom Shakespeare calls the Duke's aunt, was daughter of John I. King of Portugal, by Philippa of Lancaster, eldest daughter of John of Gaunt. They were, therefore, no more than third cousins. RITSON.

 "his horse with his swourde, saying: let them flye
 "that wyl, for surely I wil tarje with him that "wil tarje with me;" and kissed the crosse of his "swourde." Clifford, in his retreat, was bea-with a party of Norrists; when "eyther," says the historian, "for heat or payne, putting of his gorget; sodainly with an arrowe (as some say) without an helde [he] was striken into the throte, and incontinent rendered his spirite, and the erle of Westmerlandes brothen, and almost all his company were thare slayn, at a place called Dinting dale, not farr from Towton." In the afternoon of the next day (Palm Sunday eve 1461) on a plain field between Towton and Saxton, joined the main battles which continued engaged that night, and the greater part of the following day: upwards of 30,000 men, all English (including many of the nobility and the flower of the gentry, especially of the northern parts) being slain on both sides. This battle, says Carte, "decided the fate of the house of Lancaster, overturning in one day an usurpation strengthened by sixty-two years continuance, and established Edward on the throne of England." RIMON.

An authentick copy of King Edward's account of this battle, together with a list of the noblemen and knights who were slain in it, may be seen in Sir John Fenn's Collection of The Paston Letters, Vol. I. p. 216, &c. HANLEY.

P. 171, l. 4. Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,] This passage, from the variation of the copies, gave me no little perplexity. The old quarto applies this description to the death of Salisbury, Warwick's father. But this was a notorious deviation from the truth of history. For the Earl of Salisbury in the battle at Wakefield, wherein Richard Duke of York lost his life, was taken prisoner, beheaded at Pomfret, and his head, together with the Duke of York's, fixed over York gates.  And hath bereft thee of thy life too soon.*

I rather think the meaning of the line And hath bereft thee of thy life too soon, to be this: Thy father exposed thee to danger by giving thee life too soon; and hath bereft thee of life by living himself too long. JOHNSON.

life too soon.

And hath bereft thee of thy life too late.
Because had he been born later, he would have now have been of years to engage in this quarrel.

WARBURTON.
He should have done it by not bringing thee into being, to make both father and son thus miserable. This is the sense, such as it is, of the two lines; however, an indifferent sense was better than none, as it is brought to by the Oxford editor, by reading the lines thus:

O boy! thy father gave thee life too late;
And hath bereft thee of thy life too soon.

WARBURTON.
I rather think the meaning of the line And hath bereft thee of thy life too soon, to be this:
Thy father exposed thee to danger by giving thee life too soon, and hath bereft thee of life by living himself too long. JOHNSON.

Too late, without doubt, means too recently.
The memory of thy virtues and thy happy end is too recent, to be thought of without the deepest anguish. MALONE.

The present reading appears to be far the more eligible. Had the son been younger, he would have been precluded from the levy that brought him into the field; and had the father recognized him before the mortal blow, it would not have been too late to have saved him from death.

MALONE.

Dr. Grey observes from Hall and Holinshed, that the name of the person who took King Henry, was Cantlowe.

I learn also from one of the Piston Letters, Vol. I. p. 249, that Giles Sanctlowe was among the persons then in Scotland with the Queen.

One Giles Sanctlowe, esquire, is among those attainted by King Edward's first parliament, and may possibly be here meant, but no person of that name seems to have been in any way concerned in the capture of the late King, who, according to W. Wyrcester, was actually taken in Lincolnshire by two knights named John Talbot and Richard Tunstall, in July, 1464. Drummond of Hawthornden observes, it was recorded "that a son of Sir Edward Talbot apprehended him as he sat at dinner at Wadding-town-hall; and, like a common malefactor, with his legs under the horse's belly, guarded him toward London." It is a more certain fact, which I have from records in the Duchy Office, that King Edward granted to Sir James Harrington a rent-charge of one hundred pounds out of his lordship of Rowland in Lancashire, in recompence of his great and laborious diligence about the capture and detention of the King's great traitor, rebel and enemy, lately called Henry (the sixth, made by the said James; and likewise annuities to Richard Talbot, Thomas Talbot, esquires; — Talbot, and — Livesey, for their services in the same capture. See also Rymer's Foedera, xi. 548. Henry had been for some time harboured by James Mayhew of Craikenthorpe, Westmoreland. Ib. 575. It seems clear, however, that the present scene is to be placed near the Scottish border. The King himself says: "From Scotland am I stoln, even of pure love."

And Hall (and Holinshed after him) tells us

He was no sooner entered into England, but he was known and taken of one Custlow, and brought to the King. HITSON

This is in every particular a falsification of history. Sir John Grey, as has been already observed, fell in the second battle of Saint Albans, which was fought on Shrove-Tuesday, Feb. 17, 1460, fighting on the side of King Henry; and so far is it from being true that his lands were seized by the conqueror, (Queen Margaret,) that they were in fact seized by the very person who now speaks, after his great victory at Towton, on the 29th of March, 1461. The present scene is laid in 1464.

Shakspeare in new moulding this play followed implicitly his author, (for these five lines, with only a slight variation in the third, and sixth, in

Shakespeare, in his attempts to familiarise ideas, and to diminish their propriety. STEEVENS. Gadshill first occurred to the author of the old story, who was probably a scholar; and Machievell, who is mentioned in various books, to whom the old story was the great exemplar of profane literature, naturally was substituted by Shakespeare in some of his plays, R. I. Act V. sc. 3. v. 111. "All England hath notorious Machievell." He also mentions the name of Machievell in Henry VI. Part III. (Warwick, &c.) This noblesman's abuse and commissions the insult he receives the King's hasty marriage, and his consequent resolution to avenge it, with the capture, imprisonment, and escape of the King, Shakespeare, in Strickland, Hall and Holinshed; but ten, as well as earlier writers, of better authority, incline us to discredit the whole; and to set the rupture between the King and his political creator, to causes which have not reached sterility, or to that jealousy and ingratitude so natural, perhaps, to those who are under obligations too great to be discharged. There needs no other proof how little our common histories are to be depended upon than this fabulous story of Warwick and the lady Ana. The King was privately married to lady Elizabeth Widvile in 1445, and in February 1465 Warwick actually stood sponsor to the princess Elizabeth their first child. What secretly disaffected him was, 1. the King's marrying one of the Queen's sisters to the Duke of Buckingham; his conferring the office of lord treasurer (which had taken from the Lord Montjoy) upon Lord Ver, the Queen's brother; 3. his making a Herbert and another of the Queen's sisters; and between that nobleman's daughter and the young Lord Lisle; and creating young Herbert knight and Lord of Dunstar; 4. his making a match between Sir Thomas Grey, the Queen's son, and lady Ann daughter and heiress of the Duke of Exeter, the King's nie. who had been talked of as a wife for the Earl of Northumberland, Warwick's brother. See Wilhelmi Worcester Annales, which are unfortunately defective from the beginning of November 1468, at which time no open rupture had taken place between the King and Warwick, who, for any thing that appears to the contrary, were, at least, upon speaking terms. RITSON.

P. 200, l. 12. 13. Is Edward your true King? for I were loath,

To link with him that were not lawful chosen. Here we have another instance of an impropriety into which Shakspeare has fallen by sometimes following and sometimes deserting his original. After Lewis has asked in the old play whether Henry was lawful heir to the crown of England, a question has been answered in the affirmative; he next inquires whether he is gracious, that is, a favorite with the people. Shakspeare has preserved this latter question, though he made a variation in the former; not adverting that after a man has been chosen by the voices of the people to be their King, it is quite superfluous to ask whether he is popular or no. — Edward was chosen King, both by the parliament and a large body of the people, assembled in St. Albans fields. See Fabian, who wrote about fifty years after the time, p. 472. MALONE.

I do not perceive the impropriety of the quarto reads rightly eternal; alluding to the plants of Paradise. WARBURTON.

In the language of Shakspeare's time, by an eternal plant was meant what we now call a perennial one. STEEVENS.

The folio reads — an external plant; but as that word seems to afford no meaning, and as Shakspeare has adopted every other part of this speech as he found it in the old play, without alteration, I suppose external was a mistake of the transcriber or printer, and have therefore followed the reading of the quarto. Or, that, if Bona refuse to quit or requite his pain, his love may turn to disdain, though the consciousness of his own merit will exempt him from the pangs of envy. JOHNSON.

Clearly this is a mistake of the copyist's. Hall, the ninth year of K. Edward IV. says, "Edward Prince of Wales wedded Anne second daughter to the Earl of Warwick." And the Duke of Clarence is in love with the elder, the lady Isabel; and reality was married to her five years before Prince Edward took the lady Anne to wife. And, King Richard the Third, Gloster, who married this lady Anne when a widow, says:

"For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter.

This is a departure from the truth of history, for Edward Prince of Wales (as Mr. Theobald has elder daughter of Warwick, Mr. Theobald made elder and younger change places in this line; in which he has been followed, I think, improperly, by the subsequent editors. The author of the old play, where this line is found, might from ignorance or intentionally have deviated from history; in his account of the person whom Clarence married. MALONE.

P. 211, l. 18. You, that love me and Warwick, follow me. That Clarence should make this speech in the King's hearing is very improbable, yet I do not see how it can be palliated. The King never goes out, nor can Clarence be talking to a company apart, for he answers immediately to that which the Poet says to the King. JOHNSON.

When the Earl of Essex attempted to raise a rebellion in the city, with a design, as was supposed, to storm the Queen's palace, he ran about the streets with his sword drawn, crying out, "They that love me, follow me." STEEVENS.

Clarence certainly speaks in the hearing of the King, who immediately after his brother has retired, exclaims, that he is gone to join with Warwick. MALONE.

P. 231, l. 15-15. And, Lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,

Where peremptory Warwick now remains.]

Warwick, as Mr. Mason has observed, has but just left the stage, declaring his intention to go to Coventry. How then could Edward know of that intention? Our author was led into this impropriety by the old play, where also Edward says,

And now towards Coventry let's bend our course,

Thou that resemblest thy railing mother

The old copies describe Edward as first blow, and Gloucester the next; as highly in his history. It seems as that Edward smote the Prince with his gauntlet, on which the rest despatch'd him. The words sprawl'd thou? seem evidently to belong to Richard, and I have therefore continued them to him on the authority of ancient editions, in preference to the allotment of modern innovation. STEEVENS.

The thought of them would have stir'd up
[A remorse.] The same sentiment is repeated by Macduff, in the tragedy of Macbeth; and this passage may serve as a comment on that. [BLACKSTONE.]

The original play reads;
You have no children, devils; if you had, I
The thought of them would then have stopp'd your rage.

This thought occurring also (as Sir William Blackstone has observed) in Macbeth, may perhaps be argu'd as a proof of Shakspeare's being the author of the first draught, as well as of the alterations and additions to it. MALONE.

P. 246, l. 24-25. and P. 247, l. 1-11. The condition of this warlike Queen would move compassion, could it be forgotten, that she gave York, to wipe his eyes in his captivity, a handkerchief stained with his young child's blood. JOHNSON.

But surely it does move our compassion, though that be not forgotten. When we see any of our fellow-creatures involved in deep distress, from a just and tender cause we attend only to their present sufferings, and not to their former crimes.

P. 247, l. 25-27. — but thou usest to for-swear thyself;

'Twas sin before,] She alludes to the desertion of Clarence. JOHNSON.

P. 247, l. 28. — where is that devil's butcher, —] Thus all the editions. But devil's butcher, in other terms, I think, is kill-devil: rare news for the free-thinkers, if there were any grounds for depending on it. But the poet certainly wrote — devil-butcher; and the first part of the compound is to be taken adjectively, meaning execrable, infernal, devilish. THEOBALD.

Devil's butcher, is a butcher set on by the devil. Either reading may serve without so long a note. JOHNSON.

P. 249, l. 8. What scene of death hath Roscius now to act?] Roscius was certainly put for Richard by some simple conceited player who had heard of Roscius and of Rome; but did not know that he was an actor in comedy, not in tragedy. WARBURTON.

Shakspeare had occasion to compare Richard to some player about to represent a scene of murder, and took the first or only name of antiquity that occurred to him, without being very scrupulous about its propriety.

I know not, however, that it is proved, on classical authority, that Roscius, though generally a comedian, was no occasional actor in tragedy. Nash, in Pierce Penniless's Supplication to the Devil, 1592, says, "Not Roscius nor Aesope, those admired tragedians, that have lived ever since before Christ was born, could ever performe more in action than famous Ned Allen."

STEVENS.
Dr. War-

Dr. Warburton reads Richard, instead of Roscina, because Roscius was a comedian. That he is right in this assertion, is proved beyond a doubt by a passage in Quintilian, cited by W. H. [probably Sir Walter Rawlinson] in the Gentleman's Magazine, Vol. LIV. P. II. p. 886. "Roscius, citator, Aesopus gravior fuit, quod ille comœdias, hic tragoedias egit." QUINTIL. Lib. XI. c. iii. — But it is not in Quintilian or in any other ancient writer we are to look in order to ascertain the text of Shakspeare. Roscius was called a tragedian by our author's contemporaries, as appears from the quotations in the preceding note; and this was sufficient authority to him, or rather to the author of the original play, for there this line is found, MALONE.

P. 249, l. 14. And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,] The word male is here used in a very uncommon sense, not for the male of the female, but for the male parent: the sweet bird is evidently his son Prince Edward. M. MASON.

P. 249, l. 18. — a peevish fool —] As peevishness is the quality of children, peevish seems to signify childish, and by consequence silly. Peevish is explained by childish, in a former note of Dr. Warburton. JOHNSON.

Shakspeare employs the word peevish in the same sense in Cymbeline, where the reader will find many instances of this use of it. STEVENS.

This epithet which Shakspeare has so frequently employed, was one of his additions to the original play. The ordinary signification of peevish in our poet's time was foolish. See Mansueti's Dict. 1617. in v. MALONE.

P. 250, l. 6. Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear,] Who suspect no part of what my fears presage. JOHNSON.

P. 250, l. 18. The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,] To rook, or rather to ruck, is a north-country word, signifying to squat down, or lodge on any thing.

P. 250, l. 22. — an indigest deformed lump,] The folio has — indigested. But the metre and the old play show that it was a misprint. Shakespeare uses the word indigest in King John.

P. 250, l. 28. Thou cam'st —] MALONE. Had our editors had but a grain of sagacity, or due diligence, there could have been no room for this absurd-break, since they might have ventured to fill it up with certainty too. The old quarto would have led them part of the way:

Thou cam'st into the world —

And that the verse is to be completed in the manner I have given it, is incontestible; for unless we suppose King Henry actually reproaches him with this his preposterous birth, how can Richard in his very next soliloquy say,

"Indeed, 'tis true, that Henry told me of;

"For I have often heard my mother say,

"I came into the world with my legs forward."

I can easily see, that this blank was caused by the nicety of the players, to suppress an indecent idea. But, with submission, this was making but half a cure, unless they had expunged the repetition of it out of Richard's speech too. THEOBALD.

P. 251, l. 16. Indeed, 'tis true, that Henry told me of:] Namely, that my birth was attended with singular circumstances. MALONE.

P. 251, last l. But I will sort a pitchy day for thee.] But I will choose out an hour whose gloom shall be as fatal to you. To sort is to select. STEEVENS.

P. 253, l. 17. Work thou the way, — and thou shalt execute.] I believe we should read:

— and this shall execute.

Richard laying his hand on his forehead says:

Work thou the way —

then bringing down his hand, and beholding it,

— and this shall execute.

Though that may stand, the arm being included in the shoulder. JOHNSON.

The quartos read:

Work thou the way, and thou shalt execute.

I suppose he speaks this line, first touching his head, and then looking on his hand. STEEVENS.

P. 254, l. 10. Triumphs are publick shows. This word has occurred too frequently to need exemplification in the present instance. STEEVENS.

THE following SUMMARY ACCOUNT of the times and places of the several battles fought between the two houses of York and Lancaster, and of the numbers killed on both sides, is given by Trussel, at the end of his History of England, a book of little value, but in matters of this kind tolerably correct. I have compared his account with our earliest historians, and in some places corrected it by them.

1. THE BATTLE OF SAINT ALBANS, fought on the 23d of May 1455, between Richard Plantagenet,

THE BATTLE OF BLOODEHEATH, in Shropshire, on the 30th of September 1455, between Lord Audley on the part of King Henry, and Lord Nevil Earl of Salisbury on the part of the Duke of York; in which battle Lord Audley was killed, and his army defeated.

THE BATTLE OF NORTHAMPTON, 20th of July, between Edward Plantagenet, Earl of March, son of the Duke of York, and Richard Nevil of Warwick, on the one side, and King Henry on the other: in which the Yorkists were victorious 1465, among whom were John Talbot of Shrewsbury, Humphrey Duke of Buckingham, and Sir William Lucy.

THE BATTLE OF WAKEFIELD, December 30, between Richard Duke of York and Queen Margaret; in which the Duke of York was defeated 1461, among whom were the Duke of Clarence, Edmond Earl of Rutland his second son, John and Sir Hugh Mortimer, his kinsmen, the Earl of Shrewsbury. Richard Nevil Earl of Salisbury was in this battle taken prisoner, and afterwards beheaded at Pontefract.

7. THE BATTLE OF BATTLE, in Yorkshire, March 28, 1461, between Lord Clifford, on the part of King Henry, and the Lord Fitzwater, on the part of the Duke of York, in which the Duke of York was killed, among whom were Lord Fitzwal-

KILLED—1,100; among whom was Sir Ralph Perreye.
10. THE BATTLE OF HEXHAM, May 15, 1463, between Viscount Montague and King Henry, in which that King was defeated.

KILLED—2,000. Henry Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, and the Lords Roos and Hungerford, falling on the side of King Henry, were taken prisoners, and soon afterwards beheaded.

11. THE BATTLE OF HENDSCOTE, four miles from Bambury, July 25, 1469, between William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke, on the part of King Edward, and the Lords Fitzhugh and Latimer, and Sir John Gemyers, on the part of King Henry, in which the Lancastrians were defeated.

KILLED—500. The Earl of Pembroke and his brother, Richard Widville, Earl of Rivers, father to King Edward's Queen, Sir John Widville, John Tiptoft, Earl of Worcester, the Lords Willoughby, Stafford and Wells, were taken prisoners, and soon afterwards beheaded.

12. THE BATTLE OF STAMFORD, in Lincolnshire, October 1, 1469, between Sir Robert Wells and King Edward; in which the former was defeated and taken prisoner. The vanquished, who fled in order to lighten themselves, threw away their coats, whence the place of combat was called Losecoatfield.

KILLED—10,000.

13. THE BATTLE OF BARNET, on Easter-Sunday, April 14, 1471, between King Edward on one side, and the Earl of Warwick, the Marquis of Montague and the Earl of Oxford on the part of King Henry VI. in which the Lancastrians were defeated.

KILLED—10,300; among whom were the Earl of Warwick, the Marquis of Montague; the Lord Cromwell; and the son and heir of Lord Say.

In a letter which was written at London four days after the Battle of Barnet, the total number killed on both sides is said to have been "more than a thousand." Paston Letters, Vol. II. p. 65. Fabian, the nearest contemporary historian, says 1500.

The custom among our old writers of using Arabick numerals, has been the cause of innumerable errors, the carelessness of a transcriber or printer, by the addition of a veilphery converting hundreds into thousands. From the inaccuracy in the present instance we have ground to suspect that the numbers said to have fallen in the other battles between the houses of York and Lancaster, have been exaggerated. Sir John Paston, who was himself at the battle of Barnet, was probably correct.

14. THE BATTLE OF TOWNEBURY, May 3, 1471, between King Edward and Queen Margaret, in which the Queen was defeated, and she and her son Prince Edward were taken prisoners.

On the next day the Prince was killed by King Edward and his brothers, and Edmond Duke of Somerset beheaded.

15. KILGERN, 1452. Shortly afterwards, in an action between the bastard son of Lord Falconbridge and some Londoners, 1000 persons were killed.

15. THE BATTLE OF BOSWORTH, in Leicestershire, August 22, 1485, between King Richard III. and Henry Earl of Richmond, afterwards King Henry VII. in which King Richard was defeated and slain.

KILLED; on the part of Richard, 4,013, among whom were John Duke of Norfolk, and Walter Lord Feffers; on the part of Richmond, 181.

of which, however, I do not observe more than can conclude little.
Dr. Warburton gives no reason, but I leave him to judge upon deeper principles and comprehensive views, and do draw mine from the general effect and spirit of the discourse, which he thinks inferior to the tubucal plays.
From mere inferiority nothing can be inferred in the productions of wit, there will be no inference. Sometimes judgment will err, and sometimes matter itself will defeat the artist. Of every author's works one will be the best, and one be the worst. The colours are not equally ing, nor the attitudes equally graceful, and pictures of Titian or Reynolds, of words poets Dissemblance of style, and heterogeneous sentiment, may sufficiently show that a work not really belong to the reputed author, and these plays no such marks of spuriousness found. The diction, the versification, the action are Shakspeare's. These plays derive Shakespeare, to whom shall they be given? What author of that age had the same easiness of expression and fluency of numbers?

Having considered the evidence given by the plays themselves, and found it in their favour, let us now enquire what corroboration can be gained from other testimony. They are ascribed to Shakespeare by the first editors, whose attestation may be received in questions of fact, however unsatisfactory and unimpeached their edition. They seem to be declared genuine by the voice of Shakespeare himself, who refers to the second play in his epilogue to King Henry V. and apparently connects the first act of King Richard III. with the last of the third part of King Henry V. If it be objected that the plays were popular, and that therefore he alluded to them as well known, it may be answered with equal probability, that the natural passions of a poet would have disposed him to separate his own works from those of an inferior hand. And indeed, if an author's own testimony is to be overthrown by speculative criticism, we can no longer be any longer secure of literary reputation.

Of these three plays I think the second the best. The truth is, that they have not sufficient variety of action, for the incidents are too often of the same kind; yet many of the characters are well discriminated. King Henry, and his Queen, King Edward, the Duke of Gloucester, and the Earl of Warwick, are very strongly and distinctly painted. The old copies of the two latter parts of King Henry VI. (namely King Henry V.) are so apparently imperfect and mutilated, that there is no reason for supposing them the first draughts of Shakespeare. I am inclined to believe them copies en by some auditor who wrote down, during representation, what the time would permit, and perhaps filled up some of his omissions at a second or third hearing, and, when he had by this method formed something like a play, sent it to the printer. JOHNSON.

So, Heywood, in the Preface to his Rape of Lucrece, (fourth impression), 1650:

"— for though some have used a double sale of their labours, first to the stage and after to the press, for my own part I here proclaim myself faithful to the first, and never guilty of the second; yet since some of my plays have (unknown to me, and without any of my direction) accidentally come into the printer's hands, and therefore corrupt and mangled (copied only by the ear), that I have been as unable to know them as named to challenge them, this therefore I was unwilling," &c. COLLINS.

There is another circumstance which may serve to strengthen Dr. Johnson's supposition, viz. that most of the fragments of Latin verses, omitted in the quartos, are to be found in the folio; and when any of them are inserted in the former, they are shamefully corrupted and misspelt. The auditor who understood English, might be unskill'd in any other language. STEEVENS.

I formerly coincided with Dr. Johnson on this subject, at a time when I had examined the two plays published in quarto under the title of The Whole Contention of the two famous houses of York and Lancaster, in two parts, with less attention than I have lately done. That dramas were sometimes imperfectly taken down in the theatre, and afterwards published in a very mutilated state, is proved decisively by the prologue to a play entitled If you know not me you know Nobody, by Thomas Heywood, 1625:

"— 'Twas ill hürst,

"And yet receiv'd as well perform'd at first;

"Grac'd and frequented; from the cradle age

"Did through the seats, the boxes, and the stage,

"So much, that some by stenography drew

"The plot, put it in print, scarce one word true:

"And in that lameness it has limp'd so long,

"The author now, to vindicate that wrong,

"Hath took the pains upright upon its feet

"To teach it walk; — so please you, sit and see it."

But the old plays in quarto, which have been hitherto supposed to be imperfect representations of the second and third parts of King Henry VI. are by no means mutilated and imperfect. The scenes are all well connected, and the versification as correct, as that of most of the other dramas of that time. The fact therefore, which Heywood's prologue ascertains, throws no light upon the present contested question. MALONE.

I have already given some reasons, why I cannot believe, that these plays were originally written by Shakspeare. The question, who did write them? is, at best, but an argument ad ignorantiam. We must remember, that very many old plays are anonymous; and that play-writing was scarcely yet thought reputable: nay, some authors express for it great horrors of repentance. — I will attempt, however, at some future time, to answer this question: the disquisition of it would be too long for this place.

One may at least argue, that the plays were not written by Shakspeare, from Shakspeare himself. The Chorus at the end of King Henry V. addresses the audience thus:—“For their sake, is guined to say

“In your fair minds let this acceptance take. But it could be neither agreeable to the poet's judgment or his modesty, to recommend his new play from the merit and success of King Henry V. His claims to indulgence is, that, though hending and unequal to the task, he has ventured to pursue the story; and this sufficiently accepts for the connection of the whole, and the allusions of particular passages. FARMER, to doubt was

It is seldom that Dr. Farmer's arguments fail to enforce conviction; but here, perhaps, they may want somewhat of their usual weight. I think that Shakspeare's bare mention of these pieces is a sufficient proof they were his. That they were so, could be his only motive for inferring benefit to himself from the spectator's recollection of their past success. For the sake of three historical dramas of mine which have already afforded you entertainment, let me (says he) intreat your indulgence to a fourth. Surely this was a stronger plea in his behalf, than any arising from the kind reception which another might have already met with in the same way of writing. Shakspeare's claim to favour is founded on his having previously given pleasure in the course of three of those histories, because he is a hending, supplicatory author, and not a literary bully, like Ben Jonson; and because he has ventured to exhibit a series of novels in a suite of plays, an attempt which till then had not received the sanction of the stage.

I hope Dr. Farmer did not wish to exclude the three dramas before us, together with The Taming offensive; from the number of those produced by him; and on account of the Latin quotations to be found in them. His proofs of Shakspeare's want of learning are too strong to stand in need of such a support. Statutus.

Though the objections which have been raised to the genuineness of the three plays of Henry the sixth have been fully considered and answered by Dr. Johnson, it may not be amiss to add here, from a contemporary writer, a passage, which not only points at Shakspeare as the author of them, but also shows, that, however meanly we may now think of them in comparison with his latter productions, they had, at the time of their appearance, a sufficient degree of excellence to alarm the jealousy of the elder play-wrights. The passage, to which I refer, is in a pamphlet, entitled, Green's Greatsworth of Witte, supposed to have been written by that voluminous author, Robert Greene, M. A. and said, in the title-page, to be published at his dying request; probably, about 1592. The conclusion of this piece is an address to his brother poets, to dissuade them from writing any more for the stage; on account of the ill-treatment which they were used to receive from the players. It begins thus: To those gentlemen, his quondam acquaintance, that spend their wits in making playes; Re. Gd. wisheth a better exercise; &c. After having addressed himself particularly to Christopher Marlowe and Thomas Lodge, (as I guess from circumstances; for their names are not mentioned;) he goes on to a third (perhaps: Osborne Deely); and having warned him against depending on so mean a stay as the players, he adds: Nor, trust them not; for there is an aspersed crew beautified with our feathers,

that with his tygres head wrapt in a player supposes hee is as well able to bombaste blanke verse as the best of you; and bei absolute Johannes fac totum is, in his ou ceit, the onely Shake-scene in a countrey.
can be no doubt, I think, that Shake alludes to Shakspeare; or that his tygre wrapt in a players hyde is a parodie up following line of York's speech to Ma Third Part of King Henry the Sixth,
